KING GEORGE ACTS IN DEBT TANGLE

Mystery Shooting of Reynolds' Cousin Probed

PITT AND STANFORD CLASH HERE

Today

Odorless Fawns.

You're a Small Milky Way.

Three Cheers for Muscle Shoals.

No Pezoozees, Thanks.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., Nov. 26.

TRAVELING OVER these hills with Charlie Eblen, rodeo champion, and first-class rider, in charge of all the ranch horses, including Arabs, Hambletonians and thoroughbreds, you see, in a ride of ten miles, more than fifty wild native deer.

Shooting them is forbidden. They share the rich pasture with fifteen thousand Holstein cattle, all branded with a G above an H, initials of the late Senator, George Hearst. He bought this ranch when W. R. Hearst was a small boy.

It is still called "the little ranch," although W. R. Hearst has added three hundred thousand acres to the forty thousand assembled by his father. The two principal Hearst ranches are each about three times as big as this one.

That would annoy Henry George, but the protected deer like it, and so do the former ranchers that got a top price for their land.

COYOTES, SAYS Charlie Eblen, kill some very young deer. The does with their sharp hoofs could kill the coyotes, but do not know how to go about it. The more powerful bucks are not interested. Says Eblen:

"What saves the fawns is the fact that they have no odor perceptible, even to a coyote. If you touch a coyote trap with your bare hands, he can detect the human odor twenty-four hours afterward, but when deer are running from a coyote, the fawn can lie down looking like the ground in color, and a coyote will run within three feet of it, not knowing it is there."

That will interest Darwinians, who say that natural selection preserved the deer that had odorless fawns.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that Gov. Roosevelt will visit Muscle Shoals, one of the most magnificent power developments on earth, idle, ever since the war, because "best minds," convinced that God made the earth's water power for them, have not permitted the government to run a plant in which the American people have invested one hundred and fifty millions.

Gov. Roosevelt, it is said, thinks Muscle Shoals should produce the cheap power that would be a great blessing to the South. Without wishing to talk or write like a "wild Bolshevist" you are inclined to the view that, since the people built Muscle Shoals, they should be allowed to use the plant paid for by them.

DOCTOR GEORGE Crile, of Cleveland, a truly great American scientist, has news that interests you, more than any political question, because it is all about YOU.

Your body, truly "fearfully and wonderfully made," consists of thousands of billions of separate living cells. Every one of these burns with intense fire, "star like," borrowed from the sun. The protoplasm of which you are composed, shares the nature of nitroglycerine, with high explosive power, and develops, not merely the average body temperature of about ninety-eight degrees Fahrenheit, but also within its "star-like hot points, produces temperatures of between 3,000 and 6,000 degree centigrade."

These infinitely small hot points, stealing and preserving the sun's heat, supply warmth, evenly, for your whole body, as a furnace in the cellar heats a great office building, only you contain trillions of separate little furnaces.

IT IS HARD for us common mortals to understand such talk, but you may safely take it from Doctor Crile that you are a miniature walking milky way, with your heat-yielding "radiogens" spaced like stars, in your system.

You may well be proud of yourself and pay attention to such a body. This shows the importance of sun baths, taken wisely, not to excess.

ENGLAND AND France have been officially invited by President Hoover, to pay the amounts due in December. Someone suggested that all the foreign countries be allowed to pay in their own kinds of money. Senator Borah, Idaho's strong man, objects to that, as chairman of the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee.

The average American will agree that they borrowed DOLLARS and should pay dollars, not "stage money" as Mr Opper puts it, in his cartoons, or "pezozees," a kind of money discovered by the comic personage "Popeye" in the land of Nazilia.

Both France and England have, in their vaults, plenty of gold to cover their debts to us. France could pay every dollar she owes us and have left more gold than any country, except this one, now owns. A small part of the gold recently shipped from this country to France, in neat little kegs filled with American gold eagles, would pay the December bill.

No one wants to be harsh, cold or cruel. But suppose we, with billions of gold in our treasury, owed money to England and France Do you think they would ask us to pay, or say "Never mind."

RAMSAY MacDONALD, who means well, like everyone else, says:

"America has a political situation. We have an economic one."

If Mr MacDonald would visit us, learn about our eleven millions idle, our factory chimneys,

NEW BRITISH DEBT PLEA DRAFTED

London Still Hopes For Postponement Of Payment

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(INS.)—Displaying the same brand of statecraft which enabled him to aid in solving tangled problems in the past, King George today took an active hand in the war debt situation.

He sent word to Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald that he wished to be kept closely advised regarding all developments.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—The British government proceeded today in the belief that arrangements could yet be made to pass the December war debt payment to the United States, despite advice from Washington to the contrary.

To that end a new note to Washington was in the making. It will follow up a note sent earlier in the month requesting suspension of the $95,550,000 installment—a note to which Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson replied yesterday.

CONJECTURE ON NOTE

What the new note may contain was a matter of conjecture, but before its framers was an expression of good will by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

The Prime Minister said:

"The discussions with the

Mrs. Pinchot, Economizing, Faces Suit

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, is being sued in Supreme Court for $4,500, the price of an empire gilt table garniture set, which she is alleged to have ordered in 1930 and then refused to accept because she could not afford it.

The suit was disclosed when Justice Edward J. Glennon denied an application by John Gibbons, an antique dealer, for a summary judgment sought on the ground that documents showed Mrs. Pinchot ordered the antique and that she had no real defense.

Gibbons exhibited a letter from Mrs. Pinchot's secretary in 1930, saying she was busy campaigning for her husband and had instructed the secretary to write that she would accept the set.

A second letter from Mrs. Pinchot dated January 24, 1931, said she could not take the set and added:

"I am sorry about this, but I simply cannot afford to buy any luxuries at this time."

SLAIN HEIR'S COUSIN SHOT

Reynold's Kin Found Wounded in Home, Motive Mystery

International News Service.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Nov. 26.—Authorities today attempted to solve the mystery surrounding the shooting of Robert C. Critz, 35, a first cousin of the late Zachary Smith Reynolds, heir to the Reynolds tobacco millions, who was shot to death last July.

Critz, a tobacco buyer and an amateur flier, was in a hospital, suffering from a bullet wound in the head.

Whether the shooting was deliberate or accidental was a matter officials were trying to determine. The wounded man was in no condition to submit to questioning and his wife was unable to explain the incident.

Critz was one of the first relatives to arrive at Reynolda, suburban estate of the Reynolds family, last July 6 after young Smith Reynolds was mysteriously shot. Murder indictments, naming the youth's widow, Libby Holman, and his friend, Albert Walker, which grew out of the shooting, were recently dismissed.

Critz was related to young Reynolds through his mother, who was a sister of R. J. Reynolds, founder of the tobacco fortune, whose estate is estimated at $100,000,000.

A weary and battered but unbowed Pitt Panther crouches in its Pitt Stadium lair today, its sinews taut for the final spring of what has been a long and rigorous prowl. The spring will be directed at the invading forms of Stanford's Indians this afternoon, and the result in melee will ring down the intercollegiate football curtain in Pittsburgh for 1932.

Thus Pitt and Stanford renew a gridiron relationship which had its inception back in 1923 at Palo Alto and was resumed in 1927 in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena. The series stands at a deadlock, Pitt having won in 1923 and lost in '27.

The game, one of the leading intersectional combats of the year, has failed to attract the cash customers in the force that was expected, but granted a continued

When the agents told who made the raid, Judge Gibson said the case should have gone to the state courts.

BRICKS CRASH IN MILLVALE

With a crash that resounded through the neighborhood, a strip of brick veneering across the top of a row of three houses at 206-8-10 Lincoln avenue, Millvale, fell into the street today, narrowly missing several pedestrians. The cause for the crash was not determined by Millvale firemen, who responded to an alarm and roped off the street. There was no fire.

Mrs. Henry Bernick, 206 Lincoln avenue, sad she was in the kitchen of her home when the crash occurred. She carried her three children from second floor bed rooms. Her mother, Mrs. L. R. Williams, confined to bed at 208 Lincoln avenue, suffered from shock. Mr. and Mrs. John G. Rheam, 210 Lincoln avenue, had just finished washing the front steps when the bricks began falling.

Mrs. Bernick said:

"I was eating breakfast when there was a crash and a rattle as though coal was going down a metal chute. Then there was a loud report like an explosion. The lights went out."

Mrse. Bernick said she carried out Richard, 2, and Marie, 3, from the rront bedroom and then took out Raymond, 7 months, from a rear room. They were unharmed.

Reform Group Fighting To 'Save' Blue Law

Contending that the state blue law of 1794 is broad enough to permit the court to stipulate any and all forms of business deemed necessary for Sunday, the National Reform Association today was leading a fight to prevent any change in the next Legislature.

The Rev. Dr. R. H. Martin, national president, with headquarters here, said the association was joining with evangelical churches of the state, the W. C. T. U. and other organizations to fight repeal of the law. A petition bearing thousands of signatures will be presented the Legislature opposing repeal. Speakers will campaign throughout the state to fight the anti-blue law advocates. Mail appeals are being sent.

Dr. Martin, declaring the Pennsylvania law is the "legal Gibraltar of the American Sabbath," pointed out:

"The contention of the National Reform Association is that the wording of the Act of 1794 is so broad and general as to permit anything and everything on the first day of the week that the courts of the commonwealth may deem essential to public welfare, and that there is therefore no need whatever of the laws being tampered with by what the association terms 'politically jammed' legislatures."

ROOSEVELT MAY URGE RUSSIAN RECOGNITION FOR TRADE

WOLL, OTHERS URGE DELAY IN DECISION

President-Elect Meets Farm Leaders for Relief Discussion

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 26.—Franklin D. Roosevelt has an "open mind" on the recognition of Soviet Russia and he intends to stick to that attitude until he is inaugurated President, it was learned today.

His close advisers are convinced, however, that he leans toward recognition. They are certain he would not hesitate to take such a stand after March 4 if he were convinced it was for the best interest of the United States.

If Soviet trade with America will help to put this country back on the road to prosperity, Roosevelt will be for it, his friends indicated.

The President-elect has received a telegram from a group opposed to recognition, asking that he withhold decision until they have had an opportunity to lay their views personally before him. The telegram was signed by Father Edmund A. Walsh, regent of Georgetown University; Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor; Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, and Tyler Page, former clerk of the House of Representatives.

Farm relief legislation, which he hopes to see enacted at the forthcoming session of Congress, was to be discussed today by Gov. Roosevelt and a group representing the National Grange.

He had planned to remain in seclusion at the "little white house" on the edge of Pine Mountain over the week-end, but he changed his mind because of the insistence of an old friend, Fred J. Freestone, master of the New York State Grange.

G. O. P. BATTLES LOSS OF VOTES IN RECOUNT

Counsel Scores Judges For Voiding Ballots Similarly Marked

Declaring the court has no authority to throw out any ballots on a recount unless it is satisfied there is fraud, Attorney B. Robert Averbach, counsel for the Republican legislative candidates, challenging yesterday's decision of Judges William H. McNaugher and J. P. Egan, today said he would appeal to the Supreme Court.

The decision threw out 73 of 96 ballots in the Third District of Scott Township in connection with the contest in the Twelfth Legislative District. Of 262 ballots found in the box by the recount board, 96 were challenged by the Democratic party, 90 because of similarity of marks. The court will announce its decision on the other ballots today.

ATTORNEY FIGHTS

Averbach said:

"The court has no authority to throw out any ballots. It must take the whole count as in the box, unless it is satisfied there is fraud. In that case the court must take the election board's count."

Previous to the decision, Attorney Averbach questioned the judges as to whether they had a right to decide on similarity of marks, as he contended the judges were not handwriting experts. They said they were invested with power to decide, and then went into conference with County Detective David Drexler, election expert, representing the District Attorney's office.

BROOKS' LEAD 208

Late return board figures in the Thirtieth Congressional District with 126 out of 185 tabulated gave Democratic candidate Twing Brooks a lead of 208 over Congressman Edmund M. Erk, Republican candidate for re-election. The totals now are: Brooks, 26,641; Erk, 26,433.

The totals in the Tenth and Twelfth Legislative districts, last night were: Tenth Legislative District, 58 out of 149 districts, McBride, 11,693; Beech, 12,614; McClure, 10,656; Callahan, 12,869; Steele, 10,048; Quinn, 13,395; Riddle, 9,970, and Craddock, 12,578. Twelfth District, 99 out of 175 districts, Steedle, 18,154; Rectenwald, 18,330; Boyer, 17,706; Travers, 17,551; Westwood, 17,597; Harmuth, 17,519; O'Rourke, 33,218.

FIREMEN PLAN REPRISALS IF PAY IS CUT

Threaten Action to Defeat Kline and Councilmen

City firemen today were reported planning political retaliation against Councilmen who attempt to slash their wages below the 1932 level.

At two meetings yesterday in Moose Temple the firemen were said to have been urged to work for the defeat of any of the five Councilmen up for re-election next year "who votes to give us the kind of dirty deal we've been getting this year."

The speaker referred to the furloughs necessitated by lack of revenue.

Mayor Charles H. Kline was also threatened with political reprisal, one of the spokesmen for the firemen saying:

"The Mayor's at the top because we helped put him there. We've always been willing to support him as long as he does right by us, but we ought to show him what we can do if he goes against us."

The two meetings approved resolutions to name committees to confer with Council's Budget Committee in an effort to forestall a wage cut in the 1933 budget and another to consult with Fire Chief Richard L. Smith and Public Safety Director James M. Clark to discuss a proposition to put substitute firemen on "full time duty" at a monthly rate of $120.

Director Clark, favoring the plan, said many of the substitutes were only getting from two to three days' work a month and many were in want.

Meanwhile in Common Pleas Court, a motion was made by City Solicitor Charles M. Waldschmidt to throw out the mandamus brought by Delos G. Harvey, one of six firemen "dismissed" in a so-called political shakeup six months ago, seeking reinstatement. Waldschmidt in his petition denied the right of the court to reinstate the former employe.

VOTE ON REPEAL SEEN DEC. 5

York, Republican chieftain, Garner would recognize a member to move suspension of the rules and ask for an immediate vote on a repeal resolution.

With a two-thirds majority required to suspend the rules and a like majority necessary to pass a constitutional resolution, Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, the Democratic whip, has written members of his party to be present December 5, although the opening day is one only of routine business.

Under House rules, legislation can be taken up under suspension only on the first and third Mondays of each month. December 5 is the first Monday of that month. Debate would be limited to 40 minutes.

In urging adoption of a repeal resolution this session, Snell said yesterday he favored a plan modeled along the lines set forth in the Republican platform, outlawing the saloon and providing federal protection to dry states. Snell long has been regarded as a prohibition supporter.

Earlier Garner, who seeks to carry out the Democratic platform of outright repeal and modification of the Volstead act as quickly as possible, had expressed the "hope and belief the House will pass a beer bill by January 1."

The Democrats have decided upon a program calling for legalizing of beer this session, and to that end hearings have been set for December 7.

Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, a leading prohibitionist, declared yesterday that "orderly procedure" would require consideration of prohibition repeal before proposals to make beer legal. He is opposed to both.

Should a resolution be acted upon favorably by the House, similar action would be required in the Senate before submission to the states for ratification by 36 of their number.

Predicting that states would soon act upon it in the event of adoption by Congress, Snell pointed out yesterday that all but four state legislatures meet in the coming winter.

Insull Doctors Fear Return of Illness

ATHENS, Nov. 26.—(INS.)—Symptoms of his recurring diabetic ailment today prompted Samuel Insull's physicians to order changes in his diet.

It was unofficially learned that extradition papers for the indicted ex-utilities magnate are expected here from the United States next Friday.

LABOR SEEKS 5-DAY PLAN

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—One plan rejected, the American Federation of Labor turned today to other proposals for shortening the work week.

A resolution that the federation agitate for a federal constitutional amendment requiring a six-hour day and five-day week was voted down almost unanimously yesterday. President William Green explained:

"We're for the shorter work week, but a constitutional amendment isn't the proper means."

Repercussions of an anti-racketeering stand by the United Brewery Workers' Union, in a separate session here, sounded in the federation's convention yesterday. Green said:

"For the present I am content to say merely that the federation is strongly behind any effort to fight racketeering in union ranks."

Joseph Obergfell, secretary of the Brewery Workers' Union, said his group was "united in the determination to keep the brewing industry out of the clutches of the gangsters and racketeers."

2 Girls, 2 Men Hurt In Auto, Truck Crash

Two girls and two men were injured early today when an automobile and truck collided in Lexington avenue at Meade street. The injured were Miss Nancy Jones, 17, and Miss Barbara Jones, 19, sisters, of 359 South Graham street, and H. E. Miller, 45, of 361 Campus street, driver of the truck, and his helper, William Reese, 33, of 211 Cortland street. The two men were detained in Columbia Hospital. Miller and Howard Auderheide, 26, of 369 South Graham street, with whom the two girls were riding, were arrested charged with reckless driving.

South Side Teller Held in Shortage

Leo Dineen, 34, of 337 Sunnyland avenue, Carrick, teller in the Iron and Glass Dollar Savings Bank, South Side, was held in the County Jail today in default of $10,000 bail in connection with the alleged embezzlement of $6,100.

Dineen was arrested yesterday at his home by Cunstable William Duncan of Alderman Thomas A Flanigan's office. The information against him was filed by Paul Yeager, state bank examiner. Dineen will be arraigned before Alderman Flanigan Monday.

without smoke, and especially our "great minds," without any plan, or even the courage to listen to a plan, he might admit that our "situation" is not entirely political.

The pound sterling dropped yesterday to a new low, and immediately, wheat dropped to a lower "new low," for all time. In the Northwest, a farmer would have to sell three thousand bushels of wheat, as O. K. Wilbur remarks, to buy a small car.

Wheat dropped, because the pound dropped. British exchange controls the price of our wheat. Fear that paying America's debt in gold will weaken the pound causes sterling and wheat to drop.

NO FOREIGN exchange controls the price of the French farmer's wheat, as this column has often set forth, during years past. The French farmer gets for his wheat more than seven times what some Dakota farmers get, on the farm.

No foreign wheat can be put into French bread or flour, until French farmers have sold all their wheat, and they have been getting one dollar and a half a bushel, while American farmers got twenty cents.

Perhaps this magnificent government is less intelligent than it has believed itself to be.

URGE ACTION BY HINDENBURG

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(INS.)—Desperate efforts were made today to induce President von Hindenburg to end the German political crisis by appointing a "neutral" to the chancellorship of the Reich.

These efforts were made at a conference between the aged Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, State Secretary Otto Meissner and Oscar Hindenburg.

Col. Franz von Papen, whose appointment was opposed, also was present.

Meanwhile, Adolf Hitler, Nazi leader whose aspirations for the post of chancellor have been thwarted for the moment, departed from Berlin to launch a speaking campaign against the government of President von Hindenburg at Weimar tonight.

After the conference adjourned it was officially announced no decision had been reached.

It was reported the President has already settled upon his choice for the chancellorship, but is keeping it secret until a complete cabinet has been lined up.

Before the firemen arrived, however, he said he was felled and robbed of $15. Magistrate J. J. Sweeney didn't believe the story and sent Shaw to jail for 30 days.

Three utility companies have offered $1,000 each toward a fund of $5,000 to buy unmined coal beneath Dormont, borough officials announced today.

They are the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company, the Equitable Gas Company and the South Pittsburgh Water Company. The coal, estimated at 1,500,000 tons, will be left untouched. Mining has resulted in homes sinking and damage to utility lines.

The borough will provide the remaining $2,000 to make the purchase. Councilman Lee Llewellyn, chairman of the committee which conducted negotiations, thanked the utilities.

BRITAIN PLANS NEW DEBT PLEA

U. S. ASKS PAYMENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(INS.)—In friendly but none the less firm language, Europe was informed today that the American government and the American people expect the war debt obligations to be discharged on December 15, and that after that Congress will decide what, if any, further leniency is to be shown in the way of softening the debt agreements.

President Hoover in his forthcoming message to the lame-duck Congress will recommend the recreation of the War Debt Funding Commission, or some other agency empowered to deal with the debts, but he has given no assurances to Europe that his advice will be followed.

These were the outstanding points in the American replies to the notes of the European debtors asking postponement of the December payment, which the State Department made public today. They were addressed specifically to Great Britain, France and Belgium, which between them owe the United States $11,042,000,000, or virtually 95 per cent of the total European debt.

Well, No. 15 IS hard.

Yet, it was prepared in a manner approved by cipher experts and CAN be solved without resorting to books or outside help.

That's sufficient hint—other than that revealing the fact that the letters in the cipher message are identical with those of the solution.

Old Bible Stolen While Pastor, Son Give Blood

The Rev. C. W. Maus, pastor of Sewickley Presbyterian Church at Millbell, Pa., today was endeavoring to recover a 90-year-old Bible stolen from his automobile while he and his son, A. E. Maus, were submitting to blood transfusions for a member of the congregation in Mercy Hospital yesterday.

The Bible had been brought to the city to be rebound for the centennial services tomorrow at the church. The large volume has no commercial value, but is priceless to his congregation, the minister said.

Just as the Rev. Mr. Maus and his son left home they received a call which informed them of the serious illness of Helen Nichols, of Minden, Pa., a member of the church. They forgot to lock their automobile when they reached the hospital. In the hospital the pastor and his son submitted to the blood transfusions.

The Sewickley church was founded in 1774, near Herminie, Westmoreland County. Its present building is 100 years old, the Rev. Mr. Maus said.

RANCHER LOSES $91,000 AFTER VISIT TO PITTSBURGH

ADVISES POLICE HE'LL SETTLE WITH 'MOB'

Sleuths Believe Him Confidence Game Victim

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Police would like to know exactly how A. A. (Jack) Drummond, a rancher of Tulsa, Okla., came to lose $91,000 in a loop hotel.

Drummond's story was that the money disappeared from his hotel room some time between Thursday night and 10 o'clock Friday morning after he arrived here following a trip to Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Cleveland.

The robbery theory was discarded by police. When they suggested the possibility of Drummond having been the victim of confidence men, he was quoted as saying:

"If that mob got the money, officers, forget the matter, for I'll get it back better than you will."

"That mob," Drummond disclosed, was several men who apparently had followed him around on his travels. They were stockmen, he said.

A. A. Drummond was a Pittsburgh visitor twice during the last six months. He registered at the Roosevelt Hotel last Tuesday, but checked out the following day. Records revealed Drummond stopped at the same hotel about six months ago.

PAYROLL BANDIT SUSPECT HELD

A fugitive for a year and a half, Joseph Andia, 22, of 1262 Epiphany street, alleged payroll bandit, was arrested in Altoona early this morning as he watched a marathon dance.

Andia forfeited his $10,000 bond when he failed to appear for sentence in April, 1931, after being convicted of robbing Max Moses, president of the American Coat and Apron Company, Sheffield street. He was alleged to have been a member of a bandit gang, four of whom were sentenced to long terms in prison for various robberies.

City Detectives Walter Monahan and Jack Mazza learned yesterday that Andia was in Altoona. They went there and surprised him at the dance.

After a hearing before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court, Andia was turned over to the District Attorney.

ACCUSE WOMAN IN JAIL ESCAPE

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Police today were still searching for Walter H. Fullmer, of Johnstown, who escaped from the Somerset County Jail, but they have an alleged accomplice in custody.

Mrs. Matt Bosser, 19, who, officers say, passed hacksaw blades to Fullmer, was arrested late yesterday and was returned to the cell she occupied recently until released on bail on charges of entering and assault. Her husband also is held on charges of assault and entering.

Fullmer, awaiting transfer to the Allegheny County Workhouse to begin a six months' to a year term on conviction of forgery, sawed the bars of his cell window and fled Thursday night.

Former Enemies Now Make Pies Of Excess Mud

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

All we see now are pictures of political opponents shaking hands.

The latest dust to cry on each other's lapels consisted of Farley and Sanders. It spoils our faith in inhuman nature. We thought those lads meant all those campaign threats.

It ain't a month since Roosevelt and Hoover chinned themselves on a national hook-up and roared like sea lions on a melting iceberg. And it's only last Tuesday that Franklin invited Herbert to the White House for dinner.

"There's a little mud left over. Let's make pies out of it."

Well, they won't fool us again. Not until 1936.

MARY ELEANOR HERSHBERGER, 7 . . . SCISSORS WONT STICK

Mary Eleanor Won't Repeat Fiasco at Bridge Opening

Little Mary Eleanor Hershberger is taking no chances. Two years ago, on her fifth birthday, when she cut the ribbon which opened the Lincoln and William Penn highways at Imperial Junction, her scissors were too small. In the presence of the governors of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, she had some difficulty making the scissors work.

Next Thursday, when she cuts the ribbon which will officially open the West End Bridge, she is going to be sure her scissors are adequately large and sharp. The granddaughter of one of the West End's earliest pioneer settlers, Thomas P. Hershberger, Mary Eleanor will realize in the formal opening of the bridge a dream envisioned by her grandfather and his fellow citizens half a century ago.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Stanley Hershberger, of 615 Walbridge street, West End, she attends second grade in the Thadeus Stevens School. She is a niece of Henry Tranter, past president of the West End Board of Trade, and chairman of the Highways and Bridges Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mary Eleanor will be assisted at the bridge ceremonies by Betty, daughter of Berton B. Croup, 120 Ruskin avenue, and Dorothy Jane Hardesty, granddaughter of Henry Muske, of Sawmill Run boulevard. The ceremonies are scheduled for 1:30 p. m.

BOY TRAPPED IN TREE FREED

East End police and neighbors rescued Isadore Davidson, 7, of 820 Highview street, trapped for two hours when his leg was caught in the fork of a tree he climbed in Fix's Hollow, between Chislett street and Cardova road, late yesterday.

Isadore saw a bird's nest in the tree, as he, his brother, Robert, 8, and two companions walked through the woods. The boy climbed the tree to get it. He slipped and his left leg became wedged in the tree fork. Failing to liberate Isadore, the boys summoned neighbors, who called police.

Ohio Chamber Files River Canal Appeal

The brief was filed as an appeal from the engineers' adverse report on a proposed canal via the Beaver, Shenango and Mahoning rivers.

'Lies, All Lies,' Reply Of Sportswoman to Husband's 'Ex'

International News Service.

DETROIT, Nov. 26.—"Lies, all lies," was the answer today of Mrs. Gail Stephens Kinard, wealthy Detroit sportswoman and wife of Dr. Kerwin W. Kinard, of Kansas City, Mo., to charges she stole him from his former wife.

"Her charges that I stole her husband are absurd. Dr. Kinard asked for a divorce from his wife because she was wrecking his career as a surgeon, for that reason and no other."

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 26.—(INS.)—"Every word I uttered in court was under oath. It is all true."

Since her divorce the first Mrs. Kinard has been employed at a riding academy here.

CALLES MOURNS YOUNG WIFE

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Government offices were closed in mourning today as a mark of respect to Senora Leonora Llorente de Calles, who died yesterday after a long illness caused by a brain tumor.

The iron man of Mexico, Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, sat in his room across the patio from his wife's coffin, his eyes moist with tears.

His stern face was drawn with the fatigue of months by the side of the young woman whose life was doomed several months ago.

More than 1,000 floral pieces and many telegrams arrived at the Calles home as friends of the couple stood guard in groups of eight beside the burnished coffin.

Ambassador Clark, of the United States, called to pay condolences.

Senora Calles was the general's second wife, having married him in 1930, three years after his first wife died. She was 30 years old and the mother of two of the general's 11 children.

"Ole man depression" was given a knockout blow yesterday as countless thousands of holiday shoppers thronged the downtown section congesting traffic, filling stores to capacity and jamming restaurants and hotels, both at noon and in the evening.

Department store executives reported the largest throng of shoppers in months and without exception indicated receipts showed substantial gains. One motion picture theater set a new attendance record for a second day's showing of a feature production.

Parking lots were taxed to capacity and several were compelled to turn patrons away.

SUDDEN WEALTH BETRAYS 3 IN BANK HOLDUP

Lavish Spending Traps Suspects in $7,500 Marienville Theft

BUTLER, Pa., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Sudden spending of a large amount of money by an alleged bank robber, state police revealed today, led to the arrest of the suspect and two alleged companions in investigation of theft of $7,500 from the Gold Standard National Bank, at Marienville, Pa.

Officers announced Frank Sunday, of Akron, O.; Marshal Van Meter, of Canton, O., and Robert Wilson, of Marienville, had signed confessions to holding Frank R. Johnson, cashier of the bank, and his family prisoners all night and to fleeing with the contents of the bank's vault on November 3.

Police said Sunday was suspected after he recently paid all his debts and purchased a new wardrobe. The officers trailed him and this week they arrested him and the other suspects at their homes.

Of the loot, state police say, $537 was recovered from Sunday, $116 from Van Meter, and only $5 from Wilson. The original split, they say, was $5,000 to Sunday, $1,000 to Van Meter, and $500 to Wilson. Distribution of the other $1,000 was not explained.

Sunday is a former Cleveland, O., prizefighter; Van Meter formerly worked as a barber in Canton, and Wilson was for a time a school teacher. The trio will be transferred to Tionesta, county seat of Forest County, for arraignment within a few days.

BANDIT'S WIFE ATTENDS RITES

SEMINOLE, Okla., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Another name written large in annals of Oklahoma crime—George Birdwell—appeared on a cross today.

Birdwell, tall gunman, who was Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd's lieutenant, was buried in his native hills by the side of his father late yesterday.

Floyd wasn't there but his wife, stylishly dressed, appeared with the group of 50 mourners at the graveside, to the surprise of officers. Mrs. Floyd, who underwent an appendicitis operation recently, was spirited from a Tulsa hospital Thanksgiving eve, the day Birdwell was killed in the attempted robbery of the bank at Boley.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 26.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

If you think this Democratic victory brought on harmony you just wait till they start to hand out those postoffices down South. There will be more people killed in the rush than in the flood. Got some real debt information first hand and not from an editorial.

Will Rogers

Mr. W. G. McAdoo was out to visit me. Incidentally all he did (and this didn't come from him either, it comes from known facts), well, all he did was make the next President of the U. S. He says he will absolutely stay in the Senate, and accept no cabinet position, even if offered. Later in the afternoon come out Congresswoman Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of W. J. She was bred in the purple in politics, and shows it.

It was the first Thanksgiving the Democrats have celebrated since B. C. (Before Coolidge).

Yours, WILL.

The Bible From Old Trinity's Cornerstone?

THE REV. DONALD M'KENZIE — CANON EDWARD M. WILSON — THE REV. JOHN S. TAYLOR — NICHOLAS J. VECCHIO

Mr. Vecchio, 600 Baldwin road, Hays, jobless workman who bought for 50 cents an unopened, auctioned crate, at Trinity Episcopal Cathedral exhibiting one of his prizes, an undated Bible that contained a print of the plate sealed in the cornerstone of old Trinity Cathedral, replaced by the present building, on May 1, 1824. A similar print, framed, hangs on Trinity's vestry wall. The crate, which Mr. Vecchio had hoped contained tools, was the property of A. Mulholland, probably a former Trinity vestryman. Mr. Vecchio consulted about his find with the Rev. Mr. McKenzie, a professor at Western Theological Seminary; Canon Wilson, from Trinity, and the Rev. Mr. Taylor, the pastor of Crafton's Church of the Nativity. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Portrait of a Columnist With a Cold in the Head

"Dear Mr. Winchell: I am not questioning the sincerity of 'Your Girl Friday!' I dare say she thinks she is doing a philanthropic act by denouncing The Actors' Equity Ass'n, but I fear she is rather young and inexperienced, otherwise she would take the trouble to verify her statements and not make an honorable association look contemptible in the eyes of the public . . . I know nothing about the technical answers which may have been given to a telephonic conversation.

"Any member, except one who has abused the privileges of the association upon repeated occasions, can apply for an Excused Card . . . When a member in arrears writes us, we reduce his indebtedness always 50 per cent.—Sincerely, Frank Gillmore, President."

We have trimmed Mr. Gillmore's letter in half because we offer you a complete enough explanation in part, and because there are other items to make room for today. Our complaint is that Equity's ruling on delinquent members doesn't apply to all showfolk.

We know that in the case of the "Forward March" show there were so many delinquents (who had been out of work so long they couldn't help it) that Equity didn't bother making a fuss. Equity "excused" the whole crew after exacting the promise that they would get their money later. But this doesn't apply to all delinquents.

We have dozens of letters from actors who are thankful that this column brought the subject up.

We know, too, that a delinquent was permitted to accept a job with a show on the promise that the manager would deduct part of the player's debt to Equity after the first week. The actor, it appears, worked one week, and was fired because he didn't fit the role. So what happened? So this is what happened. His debt to Equity had been deducted from his small wages, and there he was without funds again and just as hungry as he was before. To this sort of "protection" we are strenuously opposed, considering that Equity poses as the actor's friend. Equity, you see, got theirs, by golly! That player needed his small change more than Equity. And cutting an actor's debt in half is not so impressive to me. Too many of them work a few weeks in the year and need that coin, and the man in the back who just cried, "Well, why don't you critics think of that when panning shows?" is merely trying to change the subject!

Equity would have you stopped from working if you didn't and couldn't afford to even pay "half your debt." Equity would see that a paid-up member got the job if it could. This is wrong—in these times, I mean. Let those stars who get heavy salaries balance Equity's budget, if they would help the ranks. But leave the one who works when he can for a lot less alone.

In a few words, Equity get their first—and if they do, they take care of you! When you are working, that is! Very few of us need help when he are working. When he is out of a job—that's when an actor needs a friend, Mr. Gillmore. Even the unappreciated N. V. A. Club used to give members, who paid $10 a year, a $1,000 insurance policy.

Equity exacts $18 in annual dues from members. For this $18 Equity protects members from managers, who might strand them. Equity also makes managers pay actors after rehearsing four weeks. This is swell. I like it a lot. The average manager has to be watched.

But that isn't enough! These are trying times, and it seems to me that for the $18 dues Equity might soften matters a lot more. Equity doesn't feed hungry actors, does it? The Actors' Dinner Club does, however. Equity is merely like the landlord, who is very sorry you are broke but could use your apartment for someone who isn't.

"Dear Mr. Winchell: I was much interested in reading your column to note your remarks about Trooper Harold J. Quinn's splendid conduct in handling a murderous lunatic recently at Highland Mills.

"Trooper Quinn was reinstated at his full pay with allowance for his previous service, and during the three months he was not with us was employed by the District Attorney of Orange County with a full recommendation from this office, and, therefore, was not financially the loser by disciplinary measures which were absolutely necessary to maintain the discipline of the force. Appreciating your interest, I am, very truly yours, John A. Warner, Superintendent."

Mr. Warner's letter, at least, explains that Trooper Quinn didn't lose his three months' pay, but it doesn't explain fully why he was suspended. We reported that he was suspended because he beat up a criminal who tried to escape. The same criminal and his confederates, who were released on bail, proceeded to hold up a theater a few days later, where they killed a cop, and wounded another. Quinn was suspended for trying to keep one of them from escaping while they were being questioned at headquarters. For which he was disciplined! Oh, Mr. Warner, my chapped lips!

One of those exciting Broadway stories you invariably read about in fairy tales, and see on the screen, was unfolded in a recent off-stage novelette . . . I recommend the facts to the various city editors, so that they might give the heroine of it, greater space and encouragement . . . Her name is Helen Walpole, who loves the theater.

Ever since "Another Language opened at the Booth, Miss Walpole witnessed every performance from a gallery pew which cost her $1 . . . About four months ago, the star, Dorothy Stickney, became ill, and her understudy, Laura Traube, filled the gap splendidly . . . Laura was rewarded with the star part in the Chicago company later.

Recently Miss Stickney had to leave the cast again and the show almost closed. Miss Walpole, learning about her idol's illness, hastened to the management, and told them how she knew the part backwards, after seeing it so often. The desperate management took the risk, and placed Miss Walpole in the role, and she was grand in it.

Thus, Helen Walpole, who never was on a Manhattan stage before, won the star part of a hit show on Broadway, and was acclaimed.

She is now Miss Stickney's understudy, and a full-fledged Equity member. And she can see the show without paying, too!

Janet Gaynor Loses Boy Friend

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 26. The team of Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell is no more. After several weeks of negotiations, Charlie and the Fox Company came to an amicable parting of the ways.

The cancellation of the contract came at Charlie's own request and was engineered by Harry Eddington, Greta Garbo's confidant and manager.

Janet Gaynor

Even with recent forewarnings, Hollywood will be surprised to hear of this denouement to the young actor's dispute with Fox. Charlie went to work for the company eight years ago, and he has been under contract seven years. With the taking up of his option on September 16 last, he jumped into the big salary class of motion picture stars. Had he been content to stay on at Fox, his salary would have taken another boost next September.

Desire for a rest and dissatisfaction over parts outweighed this consideration and led the player to petition for his release. Contrary to most arguments of the sort, the negotiations have been carried on with a complete lack of bitterness. At least none has been publicly expressed.

ATTENDS PARTY

Jean Harlow was a member of a party at the Cafe La Boheme the other evening. It was one of her first public appearances since the death of Paul Bern. This spot—with a show headed by Karyll Norman—is a favorite night-life haunt of Helen Chandler and her author-husband, Cyril Hume. Arthur Caesar usually may be found there too.

Jean Harlow

A week-ender at the Desert Inn in Palm Springs reports that Ann Harding was motoring around with Dudley Murphy and that Leslie Howard was showing his young son, Ronald, some of the finer points of cycling. Informal dress being the rule at all the desert resorts, Lillian Roth and Lucille Davis went everywhere in sweaters and tennis shorts.

GAIL NOW TRAINER

Remember Gail Henry, the comedienne? She is now married to Harry East, who makes a fine business of training animals for the movies. Gail aids in the work and is co-author of a forthcoming book on the subject.

Gilbert Roland is one of the film colony's most serious tennis devotees and is becoming a top-rank player. You can see him almost any day at the Beverly Hills Tennis Club. Charles Farrell is another star who often plays at this club, and, incidentally, he has a 16-year-old protege, who coaches believe will develop into a sensation.

JUNE CLYDE, UNIVERSAL ARTIST, IS THE THOUGHTFUL LADY

BROADWAYS OF THE WORLD

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By MARK HELLINGER

ABOARD THE S. S. REX, GENOA-BOUND.—It's a nice day at the moment, the nicest of the trip. I actually took a walk this morning. Yes, I did. I walked halfway around one of the decks before sitting down for a rest. And if you don't think that's a journey on this gigantic liner, you have another think coming. It's more exercise than I've gone in for in five years.

I'm writing this piece as I sit in my deck chair—and half the passengers think I'm crazy. The other half know I am. All of which sounds like an old Weber and Fields gag, and it gives you an idea of my state of mind at the present time. Or at any time, for that matter.

I suppose I should really write a few more lines about this round-the-world idea of mine before drifting into articles about the conditions in foreign cities. After all, it's rather strange for a Broadway columnist to leave his native habitat (wow!) and prowl around the world in search of copy. I don't think it's ever been done before. And after I've finished, the odds are that it never will be again.

Frankly, I've been nursing the idea for a long, long time. Maybe I should have been a gossip columnist because I've always had a terrific yen to see how the other folks lived. And maybe I'm wrong. Practically everyone has told me that I'll be the happiest guy in the world to get back to New York.

And maybe I will. Maybe I'll be like the bird in that old chestnut; the man who wore very tight shoes all day long just because it felt so good when he took them off at night. But I don't know. As I write this, I have a sense of elation. I feel that I'm doing something that is good for me. Perhaps that's because I haven't been gone long enough to learn the truth. We'll see.

Strange, though about the reactions of the various people I met during the month before I sailed. When I told anyone that I was going around the world, the answer was inevitably one of the following three:

"You don't say! Could you use a valet to go with you?"

"Wish I were you. Bum voyage!"

"You lucky stiff! Don't need a secretary, do you?"

It got so that I knew exactly what answer to expect from the different people. The alleged comedians always said "Bum voyage!" and the rest wanted to know whether I needed a secretary or a valet. I met no one who simply said: "Have a swell trip, Mark, and come back safe and sound." Oh, well—

Into my office one afternoon marched Gil Wales, reporter de luxe for various papers both here and abroad. Mr. Wales is a nomad of the press, a sort of victim of nomad's land. When he tires of New York, he accepts a job in Paris. When he tires of Paris, he pounds a typewriter in Chicago. When he quits Chicago, he goes to Hollywood. And there he rests, if possible.

Some seven or eight years ago, Gil had the desk next to mine on the Daily News. He said goodnight to me in the usual fashion one evening — and the next thing I knew, he was on his way to Paris. When I reached Paris several years later, one of the first visitors to my hotel was Mr. Wales.

"Morning, Mark," he said casually. It was exactly as though he hadn't disappeared some years before. "Anything new?"

He wasn't going to outdo me in that casual business. I handed it right back.

"Not a thing, Gil," I returned. "Everything's just the same. How are you enjoying your work in Paris this trip?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Not so much," he replied. "Think I'll hop for India soon."

I smiled to myself. The man, I felt, was just talking to hear himself talk. He left. And I called his office the following day.

"Mr. Gil Wales there?" I asked.

And so it was that, only a few weeks ago, Mr. Wales drifted into my office. He hadn't changed one iota. Said he had just returned from Paris and that it was good to be back in New York after all those years. And how was I doing, he wanted to know.

"Well," I replied in an offhand fashion, "I suppose you know that I'm leaving for a trip around the world in a short time?"

Mr. Wales crossed his legs. It was more animation than I had ever seen his display.

"You don't say," he returned. "All around the world, eh? Tch, tch, tch. That's too bad."

My eyes opened wide. This was a new answer. Here was the first person to throw ice water on the proposition.

"Too bad?" I repeated "What's too bad about it?"

He lit a cigaret.

"Going to India?" he asked by way of reply.

I told him I was. He shook his head.

"It's a shame," he murmured. "Don't you know that 94 per cent of the white men never return from India in a normal condition after any length of time? Want to watch out for disease in that country. It's bad. Expect to travel on the Red Sea?"

I said I did. He sighed.

"Take a large boat," he advised. "The little ones sink one after the other. No use dying when you don't have to. You're not going to be around Indo-China in March or April, are you?"

By this time I was growing a bit dubious.

"Yes," I returned. "I am. What about that?"

"Typhoons," he asserted sadly. "Ever been in a typhoon? Scare the devil out of any living man. I've seen 'em pick up big boats in a harbor and pile them right on shore. Typhoons kill plenty of people. Watch out for them."

I was on the verge of picking up the phone and canceling my trip.

"Anything else?" I muttered.

He nodded.

"Typhoid," he returned, "Outside of leprosy, which is also a possibility, typhoid is the worst disease you can get. Look out for it in Africa. I had a friend once who was the healthiest guy in the world. He set out on a short trip through Africa. And you can take it from me, Mark, that this fellow was afraid of nothing.

"Well, before he knew what struck him, he was a victim of typhoid. The poor fellow never even had a decent burial. I ——"

This was a little too much. I twisted my collar nervously and stood up.

"Look here, Gil," I cried. "I've always liked you. But I'm telling you right here and now that this conversation is making me nervous. Is there anything else you'd like to say before we say goodby?"

He stood up, too. And he grinned.

"Yes," he asserted. "Just one more thing. This trip sort of appeals to me. You don't need a valet, do you?" . . .

White House Meet on Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Striking scenes in connection with the history-making visit of President-elect Roosevelt to President Hoover at the White House in Washington to discuss the European debt situation, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. The pictures show Gov. Roosevelt arriving in Washington and being driven through the capital streets in an open car acknowledging the cheers and applause from the thousands of persons on the sidewalks.

There is a great crowd at the White House gates as he drives into his future home. Then follow exclusive statements from Senator Fess, of Ohio, and Representative Rainey, of Illinois, both of whom declare that any cancellation of European debts must not be tolerated. Both warn that cancellation of any part of the debt would mean that the American people would be forced to pay it.

STRIKE IN BERLIN

The first pictures of the car strike in Berlin which paralyzed traffic in the German capital for several days by tying up the street cars, subways and bus lines, are shown. Police escort a few buses through the crowds but the latter become so unruly that the police charge them. Thousands flee the drawn clubs and many are slightly hurt in the riot that follows. There is a vivid description by The Globe Trotter.

Impressive scenes of the greeting to Emperor Hirohito by thousands of children upon the occasion of his visit to Osaka, are pictured. A veritable sea of girl students sing a welcoming song.

NAVAL "HELL DIVERS"

Naval Reserve airplanes from Floyd Bennett Field are shown roaring over the skyscrapers of Manhattan in practice formations. The fliers are known as the Navy's "Hell Divers."

Pictures of the first winter rodeo come from Bakersfield, Cal., where daredevil cowboys attempt to ride wild steers.

Another thrill is contained in unusual pictures of motorcyclists of Toledo, O., attempting to capture live turkeys.

Pet animal lovers display their prizes at the pet show in New York. There are chimpanzee, marmosets, dogs and other animals innumerable, but a proud kitten walks off with the first prize.

Warner to Be Guest In the Davis

"Pop" Warner, former Pitt coach, and his boys of the Stanford football team, will be guests of the Davis Theater at the 8 o'clock show tonight. The feature is a football picture, "That's My Boy."

Anatole Club Dance In Schenley

The Anatole Club will hold its Thanksgiving dance in the Hotel Schenley tonight. Daum-Sanderson and Austin Wylie and their orchestra will furnish the music. Table service will be provided.

Movie 'Rain' Is Feature In Penn

By WILLIAM PFARR

Joan Crawford is a bad, bad woman in the current picture in the Penn—no less than Sadie Thompson in "Rain," the part which Jean Eagels made vivid on the stage. Miss Crawford tosses her hips, snaps her fingers and talks the slang of her circle. A lot of folks will say that she doesn't equal Miss Eagels' performance, but probably no one else in Hollywood could.

Because of her role, Miss Crawford is the most interesting character in the play. Playing opposite her as Mr. Davidson, the reformer, is a better actor, Walter Huston. The direction by Lewis Milestone is excellent—so excellent that Mr. Milestone has been able to make the picture seem as uncensored as the play.

The story is still the same. A reformer (in the play he was a missionary) tries to put the bad, bad woman on the straight and narrow and in the end falls victim to her charms. His only consolation, it seems here, is that the charmer was Joan Crawford.

There are excellent newsreel shots and the Mickey Mouse comedy (which, incidentally, doesn't concern Mickey Mouse) is of the best. At the noon performance yesterday the theater was almost filled.

STEEL UPTURN SEEN AFTER YEAR END

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel production was off a trifle this week, but may be estimated at close to the 17 per cent named last week. No allowance for the holiday is necessary as it affected producers and consumers alike. The official report is likely to show an average for the month of between 17 and 18 per cent, against 19 per cent shown for October, and a low of 14 per cent for August.

All precedents indicate that no increase in steel production should be expected in the remainder of the year, but on the other hand there should be little or no further decrease, as the gains made up to the middle of October were not chiefly of seasonal character.

There is no conceivable reason why there should not be usual seasonal increase in steel demand and production immediately after the turn of the year, for even in these three years of generally declining activity there have been upturns, very sharp in two of the cases. The trade expects improvement of more lasting character to develop in March, by all odds the favorite month for such a turn, taking up improvement where seasonal swing leaves off.

AUTOS TAKING STEEL

Steel requirements of the automobile trade continue to increase, making the only notable exception in the general steel situation. Two large makers bought steel recently, one has since bought an additional tonnage and a third has bought. It is held certain that this month's automobile production will exceed that of October by a fair margin, with next month to show a greater gain. October was the low month in many years.

New York Central has released 6,000 tons of rails for early rolling. Railroad orders for steel have been so spotty that no general trend is disclosed, the only point being that the roads have bought some steel in the last six weeks against virtually none previously

The farm implement industry is nearing its new season, with stocks thoroughly liquidated.

Contracting for tin plate for next year's delivery is proceeding leisurely, following the price announcement of November 17. A much larger demand for packers' cans is expected than last season. Mills are now operating at about 40 per cent.

PRICES HOLD STEADY

Fabricated structural steel lettings have increased in the last two weeks, but the average since September 1 is well below that in the first eight months of the year.

The project to lay a six-inch gasoline pipe line from Toledo to Detroit has been postponed to next season. There has been virtually no line pipe business this year. There are many projects simply awaiting financing.

The important finished steel products have been showing no price changes of late and none are expected for the new quarter.

The scrap market has had an especially dull week as with short orders nearly all completed there has been little trading between dealers. Heavy melting steel is easier but shows no definite basis for a lower market quotation. Consumption is fair, with mills using a larger proportion of scrap to pig iron than formerly, but mills are reducing their stocks.

COX REQUESTS PUBLIC AID

The Thanksgiving holidays are over, but this does not lessen the requests for aid from hundreds of jobless and needy who look to Father Cox for daily relief. The public responded in a really wholehearted manner to his appeal for food to specially supply the holiday needs. Now, however, it is back to the old grind—the same old breadline at St. Patrick's and the same hundreds of families that must be cared for every day with food and clothing.

Father Cox says that he needs the co-operation of a kind-hearted public more than ever. The demands upon him for relief are greater and greater every day. Somehow or other he seems to take care of these demands, but he never knows where tomorrow's food and clothing is coming from.

That is why the Sun-Telegraph has inaugurated a subscription drive for his unemployment relief fund. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or through the special subscription cards he and his assistants are distributing, brings to his fund a liberal cash commission. Father Cox says that each subscription will feed three families one entire day.

CARRIERS LEAD STOCK PRICE UPTURN

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—The stock market braced itself today and in the early trading prices ran up from fractions to about 2 points, under the leadership of the rails.

Trading was quiet and the market apparently was dominated by professionals, some of whom were presumably covering previous short sales. Santa Fe, Union Pacific and Lackawanna gained more than a point. New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Canadian Pacific were fractionally higher. United States Steel, Woolworth, Case, Corn Products and General Electric gained substantial fractions, while Allied Chemical, American Telephone, National Biscuit and Westinghouse Electric were up more than 1.

The statement of Prime Minister MacDonald, of Great Britain, that the position of the United States Government on war debt postponement was clear to Britain and was regarded as reassuring in some Wall street quarters, although the British leader was obviously warning his constituents to expect no settlement of the whole debt problem for an indefinite time.

The weekly Federal Reserve report showed an increase over the previous week of $26,083,000 in the system's gold holdings. The Reserve System held $3,053,152,000 of gold, the richest for the year to date, and an increase of $491,957,000 from the low point reached on June 15. Meanwhile a gain of $36,000,000 was reported in the nation's monetary gold stock, carrying that figure to $4,320,000,000 which compared with the June 15 low of $3,909,000,000. Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding gained $4,000,000 in the week. Circulation was up $6,000,000.

Railroad earning reports for October showed that the recent traffic bulge had brought net operating figures to a close parity with 1931, for the first time this year. The first 18 roads to issue statements reported net operating income of $23,627,000 against $24,134,000 in October, 1931, a decline of only 2.1 per cent. In September the same roads reported total net operating income of $17,768,000 against $18,846,000 the year before, a difference of 5.7 per cent.

Sterling rebounded 1⅜ cents at the opening of the foreign exchange market. London cables were quoted at $3.22⅛.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

The most brilliant social function of the year, the annual Cinderella Ball, held in the University Club last evening, attracted the greater part of Pittsburgh's and Sewickley's "400." And of course the major attraction of the affair was the special dances given by the debs of this year and of the past season.

The committee members were the first to arrive, and among them were the McCance sisters, Betty, in white pebbly satin, and Helen, in pink satin, and Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Jr., whose gown was of black crepe with gardenias at the waistline. Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland, too, looked very smart, in brown lace having a girdle of brown velvet extending in wide streamers the length of the skirt in back. Mrs. Roberdeau Green Annan wore an unusual creation of violet-toned crepe with cartridge-pleated bands of red velvet over the shoulders, and a girdle of the velvet.

Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III, another of the committee, wore blue crepe. Katharine Collin I saw in black crepe made with a slight train, and I noticed that her black evening bag had three red velvet flowers to match the bows on her slippers.

The debs arrived early, too, and Patsy Mellon was wearing yellow satin, Bertha Brooks white rough crepe with touches of orange velvet at the neckline. Georgianna Collin's gown was of red crepe with the bodice embroidered with beads and gold thread. Martha Yost appeared in pink bagheera, having a jacket with the short sleeves banded with kolinsky, and Althea Robinson wore cream colored yellow velvet. Lucretia Billings, too, looked smart in black velvet and blonde Mary Jennings chose flax blue crepe having shoulder bands of white crepe in petal effect.

Arrive Early

Petite Nancy Byers was ethereal in orchid chiffon with a shell pink feather boa, and Lucille Todd wore gleaming white satin. Betty Shaw chose holly berry red velvet with a jacket to match.

Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., was one of the cigaret sellers, and her gown was of black crepe modishly trimmed with long fringe on the cape collar and the skirt. Mrs. George A. Kelly III was also a cigaret vendor and wore black velvet.

Cigaret Vendors

Mrs. J. Shirley Austin wore white satin; Mrs. W. W. Blair, garnet satin; Mary Franklin Robinson, green satin; Mrs. Jack Bissell, pink lace; Emily Frew, sapphire blue satin; Mrs. W. Terrell Johnston, red crepe, and I saw the junior James McKays with Mrs. McKay in blue crepe.

Mrs. Alfred Hunt was there, too, in green crepe embroidered with sequins; Mrs. John Frazer, in red velvet with touches of black at the neckline; Mrs. William Zang, in steel blue satin, and Helen Leovy, stately in brown and beige chiffon with a band of gold cloth draped over one shoulder to the decolletage in back.

Mrs. Robert Carson, Jr., I saw chatting with friends, in black chiffon and lace, and I caught a glimpse of Virginia Drake, in pink satin and Kolinsky. Mrs. A. Cameron Mann was there, too, in green crepe, and Marjorie Gethoefer in black crepe. Rosamound Fitch's costume was of flowered white crepe and with her was Mary Black. Alice Rust wore a gown having the bodice of lame and the skirt of red velvet, and Betty Dunlap chose sea foam green chiffon with many godets adding fullness to the skirt, and I saw the junior W. C. Robinsons among the dancers.

In Black Chiffon

Mrs. Reginald Quaile chose black crepe with a narrow belt of brilliants and Mrs. Raymond Nimick appeared in black velvet. Attractive Mary Childs was there, in black velvet having a deep cape bordered deeply with white fox, just in the front of her gown, and a deep V-decolletage in back. I also caught a glimpse of Mrs. J. B. Kelly in blue satin with a jacket of ecru lace.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

The debs and post-debs, feature dancers at the Cinderella ball last night, were delighted that their appearance was scheduled late in the evening.

The reason? Because by that time the hundreds of dancers would have worn off a lot of the newly waxed ball floor. Yesterday morning at rehearsal, between a freshly waxed floor and new tap shoes, the girls were having a struggle. Two farmerettes and a Pierrot took grand spills, and didn't mind them a bit.

Girls who've "made" the Junior League are resting after their labors. One post-bud, Rita Borntraeger, during her provisional membership, sat up until 2:30 o'clock one morning typing slowly and painfully a short story.

After the final examination, she was sure she'd failed. Imagine her surprise when she learned she had made 99½!

Rita and Katharine Frazer have become junior members of the Twentieth Century Club, did you know?

STYLE OF EVENING COSTUMES CONTINUES TO SHOW CHANGES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 26. — The Paris evening gown continues to do a quick-change act. Not only do evening frocks sport little jackets and coats that make them over into dinner dresses and semi-tailored suits, but the style of the dresses themselves is changing. There is a tendency to make skirts of formal evening dresses either definitely long or definitely short, to make sleeves—when there are any come nearer the elbow than the shoulder, and to cut necklines higher, both in front and in the back.

* * *

MANY OF the newest evening dresses have no decolletage at all at the back and only a very slight one at the front. Many of them have sleeves which are really sleeves and not just continuations of shoulder straps. Many have skirts that not only touch the floor, but trail behind. One designer reports that many of his clients order little trains added to dresses that were designed with even hems.

* * *

BOTH EVENING gowns that are sketched today have dripping floor-length skirts of marked fullness. Both—in spite of modified necklines—are dresses in the grander manner and are not meant for extremely young women. Both make much use of draping about the natural waistline, with a tendency toward a lowered line by means of bows and loops of the dress fabric.

* * *

D. A. R. Speaker Tells of War Menace

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

If the Manchurian situation is not handled carefully a greater war than the World War will be precipitated, Dr. John Barrett, director-general of the Pan-American Union, told the Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday at a meeting in the Hotel Schenley. Dr. Barrett said the Lytton report should be read by every man and woman in the United States.

Anti-American sentiment is growing daily in Europe and Asia, and against that the United States needs the support of the 20 nations to the south for both her own and the protection of Latin-America. The day this country recognizes Soviet Russia, all anti-American feeling there will cease, he said, speaking of Russia as a magnificent example of solidarity, in the hands of whose youth lies potential friendship or enmity.

FIRST MICHIGAN ROSE TEAM RECALLED

IF MICHIGAN PLAYS in the Rose Bowl game it will be only the second time the Wolverines have ever appeared on the Coast. The first trip dates back 31 years to the Tournament of Roses contest on January 1, 1902, when Fielding Yost took out the great team that had gone through the 1901 season without being defeated, tied, or even scored on. The Coast representative on that occasion was Stanford, playing here today against Pitt, and at which school Yost had coached before going to Ann Arbor.

Fielding Yost

That powerful Michigan team had swept through a 10-game schedule, including Albion, Case, Indiana, Northwestern, Buffalo, Carlisle, Ohio State, Chicago, Beloit and Iowa, rolling up 501 points and blanking every opponent. High score was 128 against Buffalo. The Wolverines kept up the drive in the Coast game and beat Stanford 49 to 0. Stanford withstood the Michigan attack for 25 minutes, then gradually weakened until six regulars had been replaced in the line. From that point on, Yost's warriors had everything their own way, showing such strength and endurance that at no time was a Michigan player forced to leave the game.

CHICAGO'S NEW ATHLETIC director, Thomas E. Fetcalf, is expected soon to announce Alonzo Stagg's successor as Maroon football coach. Judge Walter P. Steffen, of Carnegie Tech, continues to be mentioned, along with Jesse Hawley, and a dark horse from Iowa.

Dopesters in the mid-West also are convinced now that there will be a new director of athletics at Notre Dame next year. Chicago reports say a prominent figure in the Western Conference may be in line for that appointment to succeed Jess Harper.

POP WARNER reports that though last Saturday's deadlock was the eighth tie game in the Stanford-California series, it was the first scoreless one.

The series started way back in 1892, but the two schools played rugby from 1906 through 1914, and after that relations were interrupted for four years. In 1892 the rivals played two games, one in March and the other in December.

MICHIGAN BOASTS SOME other remarkable records in addition to the fact that the Wolverines have lost only one of their last 30 games. For instance, according to Fielding Yost, no forward pass has been intercepted for a touchdown against Michigan in 25 years. The closest call came in the Wisconsin charity game of 1931, when Schneller carried one to the 10-yard line before he was run out by Hewitt. And among other notable performances it might be mentioned that Michigan recovered 23 out of 28 fumbles by opponents this year, and 27 out of 29 last year, or 50 out of 57 in two successive campaigns. That's following the ball.

Benny Friedman

NO MORE COLLEGE coaching jobs for Benny Friedman. He intends to stick to the pro playing division, saying he has found it's better to make mistakes himself and perhaps take a panning than to sit on the bench and watch the kids he's supposed to teach bungle their way through a game.

"I used to lose more weight watching one Yale game than I would playing a series against the Green Bay Packers," Friedman remarked. "And I got practically nothing for it. They're allowed only $22,500 for coaches at Yale, and Stevens, Comerford and Walsh draw down $21,000 of that. I'll never do it again. There are more headaches on a coaching job than in anything else I ever tried."

FRIEDMAN ADMITS HE is not throwing so well this year, but declares he CAN throw just as well as he ever did. He explains this statement as meaning that it takes more than one man to throw a pass, just as it takes more than one man to make a punt. And he is not referring to the receiver, he adds.

Benny says almost anybody can go out and grab the ball if it's in the right spot for him. It's the players who protect the passer who are so important, and the veteran star isn't getting the protection in blocking co-ordination he formerly received. He figures forward passing this way: Thrower, 40 per cent; protection, 40 per cent; receiver, 20 per cent.

PITCHER FRED MARBERRY is said to be one of the veteran players Washington will not retain under Joe Cronin's managership. Marberry still is rated a good hurler, but, since Bucky Harris left Washington, he has appeared not to be the hard worker he formerly was. Walter Johnson could not handle him, and to avert any possible further trouble the big chucker is to be traded if a satisfactory deal can be made for him. The A's, Tigers, White Sox and Browns are reported to be seeking Marberry, but so far none of them has made an offer acceptable to Washington.

FROM ART SMITH, track coach at West Virginia University, comes a letter in which he differs with Lawson Robertson, of Penn, on the effects of cross-country running. Robertson pronounced the six-mile course too long for a growing boy, said he kept the Penn team out of the I. C. 4-A title run on that account, and expressed the opinion that a three-mile route would be sufficient for a fair test.

"Perhaps Lawson would have entered his team if he had seen a chance for it to retain the title won last year," Smith writes. "Secondarily, his staying out may have been more or less his reaction to a failure to compel the powers that be to follow his suggestions in the conducting of that event.

"CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING, contrary to Robertson's opinion, properly conducted, and with the entrants conditioned and trained under competent supervision, is not harmful to the college boy of 19 years and upward. On the contrary, we have much evidence to show that it is highly beneficial.

"Replies to a recent questionnaire sent to medical and research directors, college physical and medical officers, former college athletes and prominent track coaches showed the opinion to be that cross-country running is not injurious to the physically fit and matured athlete. Practically all of those replying spoke highly of it as a fine and beneficial college sport. Adding my own indorsement to the sport, I offer just one good rule for the athlete in training always to bear in mind: 'Keep within your limit and carry a reserve at all times.'"

Ralph Greenleaf

THOUGH HE WILL be favorite over the field in his attempt to win the world pocket billiard championship for the tenth time in his career, and admittedly still looks like the class of the sport, Ralph Greenleaf may encounter stiffer opposition than usual in the annual title tournament, opening in New York on December 5 and lasting 18 days. Nine players will take part, in addition to the champion. They are George Kelly, of Philadelphia, last year's runner-up; Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, title winner in 1930 and third last year; Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, seven-time champion; Benny Allen, of Kansas City, who held the crown three times; Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia; Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago; James Mills, of San Jose; Walter Franklin, of Kansas City, and James Caras, Eastern sectional winner. Each of the 45 games scheduled will be at 18.2 balls, the style of play to be 14-1 rack.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Army and Notre Dame renew their 20-year-old football rivalry for the eighteenth time in the Yankee Stadium today, with the invaders from South Bend on the short end of the betting for the first time in many years.

Despite threats of cold and rainy weather, a capacity crowd of 80,000, the largest of the season, was expected to turn out. Most of them will come to see the collision between two high-class, well-matched teams, but a few also because of the pageantry that surrounds this spectacular rivalry.

Game time will be 1:45, eastern standard time, but most of the crowd will be in the stands fully an hour earlier to make sure they do not miss the complicated maneuvers of the corps of cadets.

ARMY FAVORITE

Army, gaining steadily in power and versatility since its early season 18-13 beating by the Pitt Panthers, is favored at 7 to 5 in the betting, although these odds may shorten by game time to close to even money.

The advantage in condition probably will rest with Army, although the Soldiers suffered one serious loss when Dick King, star end, broke an ankle in the Harvard game. Otherwise the squad, headed by the sensational Pick Vidal in the backfield, and big Milt Summerfelt in the line, is in perfect condition. The varsity has played only two minutes in actual competition since the Harvard game, going in long enough to score the touchdown that beat West Virginia Wesleyan last week.

Seven "key-men" in Notre Dame's lineup, on the other hand, have come down with illness or injuries, although all are expected to play at least a part of the game. George Melinkovich, generally rated the Ramblers' best back; Jim Harris, lineman, and Emmett Murphy, reserve quarterback, who called the plays that scored two touchdowns against Navy, have been reported suffering from influenza.

ANDERSON PESSIMISTIC

Ray Brancheau, halfback; Joe Kurth, tackle, and the regular ends, Capt. Paul Host and Ed Kosky, have been suffering from injuries that have destroyed at least a part of their effectiveness. Says Coach Hunk Anderson:

"We hope to hold them to three touchdowns. This Vidal is a sparkplug. I'm afraid he'll light up that Army team and will hit us like a cavalry charge. My poor boys—."

Army will not be deceived by Anderson's wailings. They'll come prepared for their hardest game of the year and probably will get it. This is one game that always is close.

Following are the season's records of the teams, each beaten only by Pitt:

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: OYSTER TREES—Until they are about 18 days old, the oyster larvae are in a free, floating condition. Later they attach themselves to any stationary clean object. They have been observed attaching themselves to the mangrove trees growing on the banks of the salt water lagoons in Sierra Leone, West Africa. When the water recedes, the natives harvest the oysters "growing" on the mangroves and feast on them to their great delight. THE HUMAN-FACED CRABS—There is a curious Japanese legend to explain the masklike appearance of the Japanese crab. It is traced to the historical battle of the Heike and the Genji in 1185. The forces loyal to the Japanese Emperor were defeated, and the survivors led by the 7-year-old Emperor Antoku, committed suicide by leaping into the Sea of Yachima. The crabs are believed to have fed upon the corpses so long that they began to resemble the fallen warriors.

TOMORROW—THE ALL EVEN BROTHERS

MOUNTAINEERS, W.-J. READY

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—The West Virginia University and Washington and Jefferson grid teams will meet at the Island Stadium today in their thirty-first clash.

The Presidents and the Mountaineers first met in 1892, and of the games played, W. & J. has won 19, West Virginia nine and two have resulted in ties.

Gov. William G. Conley, of West Virginia, and Mrs Conley will see the game from a specially constructed box, flanked by others prominent in the state. Both President John Roscoe Turner, of West Virginia, and President Ralph Hutchison, of W. & J., will be present.

The teams arrived this morning, the Mountaineers going to the Wheeling Country Club. The Presidents will come by automobile and go directly to the Stadium.

The West Virginia team is in good shape, according to word received from Morgantown. Bert Gray, W. & J. center, will be kept out by a slight injury, it is expected. Gerhart Zagray's leg injury is not as serious as first thought, and he will be in the President's lineup.

Ross Beats Farr In Milwaukee Bout

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Barney Ross, Chicago lightweight, was awarded the judges' decision over Johnny Farr, Cleveland, in a 10-round bout here last night.

Farr was knocked down four times during the match, but made a game comeback in the final round. Ross weighed 135, Farr, 135½.

BID SOUGHT BY MICHIGAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(INS.)—Michigan will be glad to go to the party—if invited.

And if permitted.

Those two "ifs" are the bugbear of the Wolverine campus. And the first one, if realized, will be the bugbear of the annual meeting here December 3, of the Big Ten faculty committee controlling the conference athletics.

Michigan wants to battle Southern California in the Rose Bowl, New Year's Day. The Wolverines, frankly, want to be invited.

But there is a Big Ten Conference ruling forbidding post-season games. And another limiting the number of football games to seven.

On only a few occasions has permission been granted to depart from the Conference statutes. Last fall several of the teams participated in charity games. The last time prior to 1931 was when Ohio State went West along about 1920, to take a handsome trimming.

The sentiment seems to be against granting the Wolverines permission to exhibit their prowess in the Rose Bowl.

Academy Riders Face Artillerymen

The Shady Side Academy and 107th Field Artillery polo teams will battle tonight in the Hunt Armory, East End.

Shady Side will present a new face in its lineup. Bill Diebold, a newcomer, will replace Bailey McCreery, who has graduated since last season, when he aided his team in winning the Pittsburgh Polo League title. Dave McCahill will ride at No. 2 tonight, with Art Aaron at No. 1 and Diebold at No. 3.

The game will get under way at 8:45 o'clock.

Heller Selected As All-American By N. Y. Sun

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—The New York Sun names two players from Purdue and from the Army on its all-America eleven, announced today.

Noting a surprising number of star backfield men in the South The Sun rates John Cain, of Alabama, as the best and also names Warren Heller, of Pitt, as "the most valuable player to his team."

The first and second team selections follow:

SUN-TELE FANS TO SEE GAME

Twenty of the spectators at the Pitt-Stanford football game at the Pitt Stadium today will be there as guests of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, having received tickets as rewards in the Pop Warner-All-America Board of Football-Postum contest conducted by this newspaper.

Answers to questions propounded by contestants were given by Glenn Warner, the Stanford coach, during the weekly broadcast of the All-America Board of Football over a nation-wide hookup from WJAS last night. Six beautiful All-America football blankets also were given as prizes.

The contest attracted some 15,000 entries, making it one of the most successful of short duration ever conducted by a newspaper here.

FOUR SOCCER TILTS TODAY

Four interesting soccer games are scheduled for this afternoon. They are Central League tussles, and the Clan Douglas-German Sport affair at Leslie Park probably will be the battle to attract the biggest turnout of fans.

Mt. Lebanon goes to Union Switch, where the Swissvalers probably will try to duplicate their previous victory over the Firemen. It is quite possible that Joe Luxbacker's team will avenge that early season defeat.

Lawrenceville appears at McKeesport. While the Strip aggregation should win this game, the Tube City team is playing tough enough football to make it anybody's ball game.

Westinghouse makes the trip to Ambridge to meet the Bridge Workers.

There will be a meeting of the West Penn Referees' Association this evening at headquarters.

fair day, the elevens should battle before a turnout of between 30,000 and 40,000.

Where Pitt is unbeaten, though twice tied, Stanford had dropped three games and been held even once. The long trip across country hasn't done the team any good, and the boys still are somewhat tired from last week's gruelling 0-0 tie with California.

Teacher and pupil match wits again in today's meeting. Stanford is led by the Old Master, Glenn Scobey (Pop) Warner, who was making football history here in this very city when most of us were still taking a bottle to bed and who was famous as a gridiron strategist and pioneer when Stanford was just another college. Pitt is directed by Dr. John B. Sutherland, who learned his football back in '15, '16 and '17 under Pop, and who since has risen to a plane on a level with that occupied by the Old Man.

The two have engaged in more than one duel previously, for after Jock finished his work at Pitt and received his degree, he went to Lafayette, and had the satisfaction of beating Pitt eleven coached by his teacher.

POP GETS REVENGE

Pop's revenge was sweet in 1927, when the unbeaten Panthers, champions of all they surveyed in the East (though there were some dissenting votes cast in the vicinity of Little Washington, Pa.), dropped a 7-to-6 decision to Stanford in the Tournament of Roses game. They are still arguing over that contest in the West, for it appeared as though the Panthers received the old razzle-dazzle. Certainly they didn't get any the best of it.

So much for the game's background. What have we in view for today? First, we have a big, rangy Indian eleven which should have gone places this fall, but didn't. We have a team boasting a crack halfback, Ernie Caddell, a fine running back, who'll go to town if an injured shoulder doesn't handicap him.

Coddell isn't the only tough hombre in that Indian backfield. There is Bill Sim, a sophomore flash, and Gordy Campbell, regular quarterback, a fine passer and blocker and aces-up as a safety man.

Anderson, a third-stringer, is to start at fullback. Jack Hillman, the regular fullbacker, is on the hospital list and definitely out as far as today's competition is concerned. The second string back, Phil Baker (not the accordion squeezer, either) also is ailing.

On that Indian line are a set of 200-pound tackles, LaBorde and Grey; a brace of rangy ends, Colvin and Doub, both over 6 feet in height, nicely fixed for pulling down passes; a pair of fast, hard-hitting guards, Kite and Corbus, and a splendid defensive center in Bates.

Stanford is at least as well off for reserves as Pitt; in fact, the teams appear to be about even in that department, so whatever edge is to be granted, it must be discovered on the first elevens.

REIDER ON BENCH

The Panthers, although they are "up" for this contest to a point even, at least, with the peak they hit for Notre Dame, could be better off physically. Both regular right halfbacks are on the fritz, Capt. Bulldog Reider has a bad leg and is not being counted on for any service whatsoever. Mike Sebastian was hurt in the Tech game and has been suffering with a severe cold all week. He spent Thursday and yesterday in a hospital, but figures to start.

The remainder of the team is in fair condition. At the ends, Ted Dailey or Harvey Rooker and Muggsy Skladany all three are primed for duty. Rooker, tall and rangy and heavier than Dailey, may get the call on account of his size.

Cuba and Walton, two fine tackles, probably the equal of the Stanford pair, will start, with Hartwig and Onder at the guards and the veteran Joe Tormey at center.

HOGAN AT QUARTER

Bob Hogan is to go at quarterback again, his size giving him the edge as far as this game is concerned, over Miller Munjas. Izzy Weinstock will be at fullback and at left half—a loud cheer and huzzah—Warren Heller . . . leading halfback of the country.

Heller is the boy worrying Stanford. They aren't so concerned over his ball-carrying ability, though he's threat enough, but they are concerned over his great blocking his passing and his defensive play. They'll take no chances with Heller.

Warner, the originator of the

W. P. I. A. L. COMMITTEE TO SELECT CHAMPS TODAY

SCHOOL HEADS FACE TRYING SESSION

BULLETIN.

The Football Committee of the W. P. I. A. L., meeting today at the Fort Pitt Hotel, designated Ambridge High as the class A champion. Springdale and Glassport were recognized as co-champions of class B, and the class AA laurels were divided among New Castle, Jeannette and McKeesport.

By JULIUS LEVIN

The football committee of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, composed of John G. Hulton, of Latrobe, chairman; Ralph Gardner, of New Castle, and J. C. Dunn, of McDonald, was in session at the Fort Pitt Hotel today granting hearings to all high schools claiming championship recognition.

Championships in three divisions are to be distributed, and with the exception of the Class A group, which Ambridge rules without dispute, the committee is going to have quite a time reaching a favorable solution.

COMPLICATED RACE

The announcement that the decisions' committee of the W. P. I. A. L. had thrown out a 6-6 tie played between McKeesport and New Kensington and awarded the contest to the Tubers because New Kensington used a tackle who was ineligible due to the residence rule, has complicated matters for the football powers-that-be.

The decision places McKeesport in a three-cornered race for the class AA Conference championship, with New Castle and Jeannette the other contenders. Jeannette shows five Conference victories, and New Castle and McKeesport each have four victories. The fact that Jeannette played five games does not entitle that team to a higher rating than New Castle or McKeesport.

Springdale High School officials are claiming the championship of the class B schools as a result of compiling a point total of 122 6-7 to 120 compiled by Glassport. Springdale was undefeated and untied in seven class B games, while Glassport was undefeated and untied in six class B games.

POINT SYSTEM USED

The football committee announced at its annual winter meeting in 1931 that the class A and class B races would be decided under the point system, while the Conference race would be governed by victories and defeats. Springdale is basing its claim to the title on this point.

Last season Hurst and Springdale were the only class B schools to finish the campaign undefeated and untied, but Hurst was declared the champion because of a higher point total.

While the football committee often has expressed itself as opposed to post-season games, it has in its power the right to order such contests to determine a championship.

There is a possibility that the committee will order post-season games in both the class AA and class B divisions.

Six Newcomers In All-America Rating Lists

By CHRISTY WALSH

Member All-America Board of Football. (Registered U. S. Patent Office.)

Only two more lists of All-America ratings will be released after this week. Names of certain outstanding stars have appeared repeatedly, others have popped up unexpectedly, without previous publicity, and this week finds six players rating for the first time. The next two weeks may hold further surprises. The All-America Board of Football will send cards of merit this week to the following 10 players.

1—BATCHELLOR—Georgia. Rated All-America by Ed Danforth, Atlanta Georgian, for his superb end play against the undefeated Auburn team last week. Batchellor stands 6 feet 2 inches and weighs 200 pounds. His 40-yard punting average against Auburn was Georgia's greatest defensive weapon.

2—HAROLD—Navy. The stalwart defense of the Midshipmen, inches from their own goal—which twice electrified 70,000 spectators at Cleveland—was due in a large measure to the magnificent fighting spirit of this great Navy center. Time after time Harold tackled the man with the ball. Jesse Harper rates him All-America.

3—KRUEGER—Marquette. In a close, hard-fought victory over Washington and Jefferson, this alert center was the most consistent star in the strong Marquette line. He blocked two more kicks, bringing his season total to seven. Krueger broke through the line repeatedly and made great tackles.

4—CORBUS—Stanford. Ed Hughes, San Francisco Chronicle, rates Corbus, all-America because of his stellar individual work against the heavy and highly-touted California line. Stanford was the underdog, but Bill Corbus led the fight to a scoreless tie.

5—KURTH—Notre Dame. He rates All-America because the Navy found it impossible to gain ground through his position. Kurth was the outstanding lineman for Notre Dame and was down the field on every punt.

6—WILBUR—Yale. Eddie Casey, All-America Board of Football, rates this Yale tackle as the outstanding lineman in a battle of mud and water. Wilbur was quick to diagnose plays, a powerful charger and opened wide holes for the Yale ball carrier.

7—OEHLER—Purdue. Only one touchdown was scored through the Purdue line during the entire 1932 reason. Eddie Ash, of the Indianapolis Times, gives chief credit for this extraordinary record to the spirit and ruggedness of Purdue's captain and center.

8—SCHALDACH—California. This hard-running halfback entered the game in the fourth quarter and, almost unassisted, carried the ball 62 yards toward the Stanford goal. Previous to his entry, the teams were tied in a knot and going no place.

9—CHESNULEVICH—Boston College. He showed the best sustained offense of the day against Boston University and rates All-America for carrying the ball in seven of the eight plays in a 45-yard march to a touchdown.

10—NEWMAN—Michigan. Rating All-America for the fourth time this season, this super-quarterback won the game and the championship for the Wolverines. His great passes were practically stopped and his running game was checked, but Newman, a resourceful triple threat champion, turned to kicking for the thrust that beat a stubborn foe, 3 to 0.

ARMY TO PASS COAST BID

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Although declining to make any statement in the absence of any official action so far on the subject, West Point athletic authorities will not consider an invitation to send Army's football team to Pasadena for the Tournament of Roses game, January 2, regardless of the outcome of the battle with Notre Dame tomorrow.

The practical reasons against any post-season activity, from Army's viewpoint, include the lateness of its season, closing December 3 with the Navy game, the term examinations starting immediately afterwards and the opening of military classes for the new year on January 3.

It is understood Army, for similar reasons, rejected an invitation to play Southern California in the Rose Bowl classic last winter. Tulane was the final choice.

Army's one and only visit to the Far West was to play Stanford at Palo Alto in 1929.

Local Golf Pros To Visit Abroad

Two local golf professionals, Pete O'Hara, of Westmoreland, and Jack Stewart, of Thornburg, will spend their vacations in their native homes abroad.

O'Hara sailed yesterday for his home in Ireland, and Stewart left last week for Scotland. Both will remain abroad until late this winter.

I. K. S. WINS

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement House varsity basketball team defeated the North Siders in a closely contested game last night on the Settlement floor, 32 to 28. The lineup:

KERR TO KEEP TWO JOBS

If Colgate gets the bid to go to Rose Bowl, the school probably will accept and Coach Andy Kerr will combine two coaching jobs over the holiday period.

Kerr annually works with Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, in handling the all-star Eastern team, which meets a selected team of Western stars in the Shriner's charity game in San Francisco. Commenting on the situation last night at the Warner dinner at the Hotel Schenley, Kerr said:

"Regardless of Colgate's part in the Rose Bowl game, I will continue in my official capacity as co-coach of the all-East team. Of course, if we get the bid, I'll not be able to do much actual coaching, but I will not sever my connection with the club."

Kerr and Dick Hanley will get together here today or tomorrow and select their all-East squad. Hanley arrived in Pittsburgh last night.

The Colgate coach, former mentor at Pitt, Wash-Jeff and Stanford, was somewhat peeved at stories which have tended to belittle the record made by his Red Raiders, who finished their season unbeaten, untied and unscored on. He said:

"We played good football and it was not our fault if our opponents were not all big league foes. Football games are booked two or three years in advance, and it is impossible to tell at the time of the booking how strong a team will be the day of the game.

"What is more, we are NOT soliciting the Rose Bowl bid. We would like to get it, sure, but we are pulling no strings in that direction. I'm proud of my team and believe it is as strong as any eleven in the land today."

Fred Swan, former Stanford star and assistant coach at Wisconsin, paid high tribute to Colgate. Swan watched the Raiders beat Brown Thanksgiving Day. Said the former Indian star:

"Andy has as well-balanced a football team as ever I looked over—and I've seen quite a few. He has no outstanding men, but as a team, it would be hard to beat. Those backs all are good, the line is fast and every man on the team can block. Colgate has a real ball club."

JESS CARVER.

Carnera, Levinsky Bout in Doubt

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera was due in Chicago today to prepare for a bout with King Levinsky at the Chicago Stadium November 30, but the King languished in bed with an attack of influenza, and there may be no fight.

Levinsky, ailing for several days, was told by his physicians last night that he could not fight Wednesday, and Matchmaker Nate Lewis started negotiations to substitute Stanley Poreda, young Jersey City heavyweight, or Charley Retzlaff, of Duluth, Minn. If neither can be obtained for the date, Lewis hoped to postpone the Carnera-Levinsky bout until December 7.

Connors Advisory Coach of Eli Teams

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 26.—George Connors, track coach and trainer for the Yale football team, has been appointed advisory trainer for all of Yale's athletic teams, effective immediately. Frank Kanaly, associate track coach, will be head coach of the track team. After 22 years as track and football trainer at Phillips Exeter Academy, Connors came to Yale 10 years ago.

TROJANS DEFEATED

The Red Shield basketball team defeated the Brentwood Trojans, 61 to 29, last night. McCluskey led the scoring with 15 points.

FRIENDS HONOR POP, JOCK AT BANQUET

The presence of two men alone was lacking last night as former pupils, old friends and rival coaches, more than 200 of them, gathered in the ballroom of the Hotel Schenley to honor Glenn Scobey (Pop) Warner, head football coach at Stanford University and former maker of gridiron history at Pitt.

As "Pap" himself put it—

"How Razz and Alex would have loved to have been here."

He referred to Razz Qualley and Alex Stevenson, two of the most famous sons of Pitt, who died during the past three years.

But it was a great party—as peppery and enthusiastic a football gathering as Pitt has held for many a year. It was sponsored by the Varsity Letter Club, and Coach Jock Sutherland, of the Panthers, also was honored.

They were all back, more former greats than you could count on the fingers of a dozen hands. They were back to pay homage to the return of Pop, and homage they paid. Warner was presented a watch. The presentation was made by Sutherland, and then, as a surprise move, Norman McLeod gave Jock a like gift.

Floyd Rose served in the capacity as toastmaster. Besides Warner and Sutherland at the speakers' table were members of the committee in charge of the affair, Dr. Packy McFarland, Dr. Hube Wagner, Dr. Homer Roe, Dr. Bill McClelland, Reggie Wilson, Allen Collinwood, Norman McLeod and Sam Hunter, George McLaren, Carl Mulert, George Carson, Andy Hastings, Coach Andy Kerr, of Colgate; Fred Swan, former Stanford star, now assistant coach at Wisconsin, and Dr. Cliff Carlson, basketball coach at Pitt.

Among those present were: Ralph (Horse) Chase, assistant coach at Ursinus; Harvey Harman, of Penn; Jess Brown, Sr., Dr. Bob (Biscuits) Irwin, Prof. Red Byers, Tom Davies, coach at the University at Rochester; Randall Soppitt, Pat Herron, Dr. Skip Gougler, Bill Kern, Dr. Tommy Holleran, Cam Henderson, of Davis Elkins; Quay Jones, associate of Andy Kerr with the all-East team; Dave Pitler, Wally Zeig, Charley Berry, White Sox catcher and former all-America end at Lafayette; Dr. Joe Donchess, Jim Marks, Fats McMillen, former all-America center at Princeton; Ray Montgomery, Tiny Linn, Dr. Jake Stahl, Buck Templeton, Leo Harris, Stanford scout; Milo Gwosden, Jim Hall, of Navy; Bob King, former Stanford high jumper; Jimmy Hagan, Herb McCracken, Jack Sack, Pat Corr, Judge John Egan, Dr. Lou McMasters, Steve Swetonic, Don Peden, Jim Rooney, Luby DiMeolo, Tuffy McMillan, Ollie Kratzert, Jakie Bohren, Carl Snavley, head coach at Bucknell; Dr. Red Pearlman, Dr. Joe Matson, Bert Smyers, Boobey Miller, A. K. Collinwood, Sr.; Rev. McKinney, of Ambridge; Eddie Schultz, George Brown and Charley Arthurs, Ollie Stiff, W. Don Harrison, athletic director at Pitt; Dr. George Kowallis, Councilman Clifford B. Connelly and Jim Malone.

Typo Loop Pioneer's Funeral Today

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Edward H. Springmeyer, Sr., 62, for 20 years secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers' International Baseball League, will be buried here today.

He was one of the founders of the league and was a player in the early days. Several officials of the international organization will be here for the funeral.

TONY HERRERA, MARCUS WIN AT ARENA

By JAMES MILLER

As long as Johnny Hayes, the iron-chinned and rock-ribbed welterweight, continues to call Philadelphia his home town, Connie Mack, manager of Athletics, will not need to worry about a catcher to help his great Mickey Cochrane with the duties behind the plate.

Hayes proved himself a capable backstop last night at the Arena, on the North Side, when he assimilated everything Tony Herrera, of Chicago, tossed in his direction without an error.

For 10 rounds, the scheduled number, with an exception of a slight pause for station announcement in the fifth stanza, when Hayes caught Herrera coming in with a left hook that shook up the latter, the dark-skinned lad managed by Ray Alvis, belted Hayes all over the ring. There were no knockdowns, but Hayes, besides being clipped regularly by Herrera, received one from his manager in the fourth round, when his contract man cut off a crop of his hair that kept falling down into his eyes. Hayes weighed 143½ pounds and Herrera 138½.

Joey Marcus, of Braddock, was returned the victor over Jackie Willis, Negro lightweight, of Philly, in the first half of the double windup. It was a very uninteresting bout and the crowd did not fail to voice such an opinion. Willis went down in the third round when Marcus caught him with a looping right while he was off balance. He was up at the count of three, taking time to brush off his gloves before getting to his feet.

Eddie Zivic, fourth member of the fighting Lawrenceville family, looked very impressive punching out a decisive win over tough Steve Senich, of Homestead, in the second bout. Zivic opened an old cut over Senich's right eye in the first round and shortly after that in the same heat dropped the Homesteader for a nine count.

Little Jerry Clements, of Jeannette, who has been enjoying nice sailing in his last few fights, dropped a close decision to Johnny Durso, of Oakland, in the opening six-round bout.

It was announced from the ring that an all-star card of four eight-round bouts will be next Friday's attraction.

CRISLER TIGER COURT COACH

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Herbert (Fritz) Crisler, who has just completed his first season as head football coach at Princeton, yesterday was named to succeed Al Wittmer as coach of the Tiger basketball quintet.

Wittmer, Princeton football coach until he was replaced by Crisler, surrendered the basketball coaching job because of continued ill-health.

Wittmer was captain and guard of the 1922 Princeton five which won the Eastern Intercollegiate League championship, and had been head coach of the sport since 1924. His 1925 and 1932 teams won the league title and those of 1927 and 1928 tied for first place but lost in the playoff.

OLDTIME OARSMAN DIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Henry Bell Simpson, 80, who was a member of the Massachusetts Agricultural College crew which defeated Brown on the Connecticut River in 1871, died here yesterday. Simpson waited 58 years to receive his varsity letter.

End for Pitt

PITT, STANFORD AWAIT FRAY

system which bears his name, has departed somewhat from the style of play as we know it here. Most of the Stanford plays are based on deception. Tricky reverses and double and triple passes make up the Stanford offense. This attack calls for one thing—first, last and always . . . a dry field. The Indians, who haven't been within 50 miles of a soggy field all fall, are hoping for a tinder-dry gridiron this afternoon.

FINAL FOR 11 PANTHERS . . .

Eleven Panthers will wind up their college football careers today. Of these, five are classed as first-stringers. They are Capt. Paul Reider, Warren Heller, Paul Cuba, Joe Tormey and Ted Dailey. Others who will don Pitt grid livery for the last time are Rocco Cutri, Mel Brown, Francis Seigel, John Luch, George Schindehutte and Art Sekay.

A decisive triumph over Stanford today will boost Pitt's stock as a Rose Bowl contender, despite Colgate's unbeaten and unscored on record. They want to see the team out there on New Year's afternoon that could lick Notre Dame and Army and go through the toughest schedule of the year unbeaten. A victory today will make 'em forget those Ohio State and Nebraska deadlocks.

Former Tartan Star To Marry Tonight

Donald Fletcher, former Carnegie Tech tackle star, and Miss Margery Taylor, daughter of John T. Taylor, well-known local A. A. U. official, will be married tonight in the bride's home at 807 St. James street.

John Karcis, former Tech fullback star, will be the best man. Miss Frances Taylor, the bride's sister, will be the maid of honor.

Fletcher, who graduated from Tech last spring, is football coach at Appalachian High School, Appalachian, Va., where his team will compete for the state title this year.

MANDELL LOSES

CLINTON, Ia., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Young Stuhley, Kewanee, Ill., defeated Sammy Mandell, of Rockford, former world lightweight champion, in a 10-round match last night. Stuhley weighed 152 pounds; Mandell, 146.

CADETS, PITT FAVORED TO WIN TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Among a scant dozen outstanding games left in a college football campaign fast drawing to a dramatic finish, the stand of two of the East's most rugged regiments, Army and Pittsburgh, against famous intersectional rivals features today's scattered warfare.

The Soldiers will play Notre Dame before a sellout crowd of 80,000 in the Yankee Stadium, the biggest of the season, while Pitt's Panthers close their spectacular season at home against Stanford in an East-West struggle of Warner formations. Both Eastern teams, reversing the usual circumstances, are favored to win and round out a football season in which this ancient sector of the gridiron battlefront has picked up more prestige and points than it has known in many a moon.

STARS TO PERFORM

Both games not only should add their quota of color and thrills to the closing stages of the season, but figure to have a distinct bearing upon final all-America selections.

Army's Pick Vidal and Capt. Milt Summerfelt as well as Notre Dame's Joe Kurth and George Melinkovich, if he recovers from the flu, will be given critical inspection by the experts charged with the heavy responsibility of handing up the all-star verdicts of 1932. Similarly, Pittsburgh's Warren Heller, Mike Sebastian, Tiger Walton and Joe Skladany will be up for final tests on their season's work.

Colgate's bid for the classic Tournament of Roses game on January 2, as an eastern standard-bearer, already has been put conspicuously on file with a flawless record of achievement but the honor may go to Pittsburgh again if the Panthers score a decisive victory over Pop Warner's Stanford boys.

Speculation has included Auburn, Michigan and even West Point in the list of possible choices for the opposition to Southern California, in the Rose Bowl game, but the probabilities are that the selection, due early next week, will rest between Colgate and Pittsburgh, both so far unbeaten, although Pitt twice has been held to scoreless ties.

COLGATE THROUGH

None of the four major all-conquering teams in the country plays today, although two of them have yet to complete their seasons. Colgate and Michigan are through, at least for 1932. Auburn meets South Carolina December 3 to put the clincher on its place at the top of the Southern heap. Southern California has a date with Notre Dame in the Olympic Stadium at Los Angeles on December 10.

Texas Christian, unbeaten and tied only once, figures to knock over Southern Methodists today and clinch the Southwest Conference championship. Louisiana State, finishing its first season under Capt. Biff Jones, plays its big objective game against Tulane at Baton Rouge. If Don Zimmerman isn't in shape to lead Tulane's attack, L. S. U.'s chances will brighten for victory and a high ranking in the South.

Traditionally colorful games, such as Georgia-Georgia Tech, Washington and Jefferson-West Virginia and Boston College-Holy Cross round out November's parting gridiron salute.

Carr, Former Big League Star, Dies

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Charles Carbitt Carr, sporting goods manufacturer and former professional baseball player and manager, died early today in Memphis, Tenn., members of his family here were informed.

In the southern city on a business trip in connection with his baseball supply factory here, Carr was stricken with a heart attack and died in the Baptist Memorial Hospital.

Carr had played first base with the Cleveland and Washington American League clubs before coming to Indianapolis as manager in 1908 to win the American Association pennant.

Born in Coatesville, Pa., Carr was a graduate of Lehigh University.

Retzlaff-Wine Bout Stopped

DETROIT, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—The heavyweight bout between Charley Retzlaff, of Duluth, and Frankie Wine, of Billings, Mont., was stopped after six rounds last night and declared "no contest" by Referee Bob Sage, acting on instructions of Boxing Commissioner Day.

Fans were divided on the justification for the "no contest" ruling. Some booes had been heard before the bout was stopped, but after it was all over Retzlaff exhibited a swollen hand, which he said had forced him to slow down.

ZAPANTICS VICTORS

The Zapantics defeated the Nathans in a night soccer battle on the South Park field last night, 1 to 0. Hamilton scoring the only goal of the game late in the first half. The lineup:

TELL IT TO SALLY

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By SALLY MARTIN

Successful Marriage Can't Be Built on Distrust

She wanted to be on the square—
So she told him of her mistake.
And did he appreciate her honesty, in her desire to start with a clean slate? Yes, he did—not.

Instead, he's been yelling at her and calling her bad names ever since she confided in him.

So—shall she go on and marry him, or shall she hand him his walking papers?

What would you do if you were in her shoes?

And—do you think "pasts" should be told?

"Dear Sally:

"I am writing to you because you have given plenty of good advice to many other people, and I hope you will be able to help me, I am so worried. Please don't throw this letter in the waste basket.

"I am a young girl of 17, and in love with a fellow who loves me—or says he does. But here's where the trouble starts, and I am sure there are other girls, too, in the same boat.

"When I was younger I made one of the biggest mistakes of my life, and I told it to this fellow a few months after I began going with him steady. I wanted to be square with him.

"We have been going together almost two years now, and he still throws it up to me every time he gets peeved about something. But, oh, Sally, Don't we all make mistakes? And I am sorry for mine. Can't I ever have any peace, because I made it?

PLAN TO MARRY

"I have many quarrels with this fellow, and every time we have words he tells me I'm 'not so hot,' that I'm a 'second fiddle,' and calls me every name you could think of. He also brings in about his sisters-in-law, and what nice girls they are.

"I tell you, I am about fed up to the neck, and I need some advice. Do you think he is fair, when I am doing everything I can to make up for the mistake I made? We have had plans about marrying in about a year. Do you think I should go on and marry him? I do love him, but I don't want to have this thrown up to me for the rest of my life.

"Do you think I should forget him? Do you think that maybe sometime I might find someone who will appreciate what I am trying to be now, and who will understand that I was just foolish once, but am not now?

"Please help me. I love him, but does he really love me? Would he be like he is, if he did? I will appreciate it from the bottom of my heart if you will give me a hand. "FAY."

MUST BE TRUSTED

Shall you marry him, and listen to his abuse for the rest of your life?

No, Fay Don't do it! Not so long as he keeps on doing what he is doing now. Of course we can't expect to make mistakes and get off scot free; but when we try to make good in spite of them, we're entit'ed to understanding and a chance. If this man isn't willing to let you put yours behind you, and to appreciate the woman you're trying to make of yourself, then give him up; for, no matter how much you may think you love him, successful marriage can't be built on distrust and criticism.

So tell him youngster. Tell him straight from the shoulder that you won't stand for being treated as he is treating you, and that if he isn't willing to be fair—to realize that you're trying to be a real woman and give you credit for it—you're through. And then stick to it!

And never fear, little girl—if you live finely and cleanly you will find someone, some day, who will appreciate that fineness and cleanness, and give you a real love.

"THE COLD BLAST"

-o- -o-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

This picture is made, with many thanks, around the idea of "MARY." She sent it along, modestly, in pity for the harassed artist, but she would sign nothing but Mary, because the idea was a sample thing, and it was offered timidly.

November, a lovely lady with amber eyes and locks, her shoulders shivering bare, like the naked Northern world, but for the rustling few, and ragged leaves and late asters and tattered chrysanthemums that she goes dressed in, is driven before the icy breath of winter. Winter is an ancient, blustering creature, all white beard and brows and hair, frosted and rimed with the crystals of the East wind, and he blows as hard and boisterously as he can on the shivering lady-season who flees before him.

Mary quotes:

"The vines remembering summer, shiver
In frosty winds, and gain
A fuller life from mere endeavor
To live through all that pain."

She says November seems to die before the bitter breath of winter, but she does not, only disappears to mortal eyes, to come back again in the guise of spring, as the vines do. And as humans seem to die and fade in the struggle against cold sorrow, but do not. They rise again into new flowering, deeper colored and hardier, after the "Winter of their discontent."

NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Presents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a host of friends with whom I have always exchanged gifts at Christmas. This year I cannot see my way clear to continue this practice, yet I do not know how to stop it.

Would you suggest my writing a note to my friends, and what shall I say? Or do you think it would be better for me to talk the matter over with them? My friends are so much more financially able than I am that I know my inferiority would "pop" forward should I find it necessary to talk the matter over with them.

I wouldn't at all recommend that you talk this over with your friends. It's a most awkward thing to do, and just can't be done gracefully. This question rises every year with many, many people. And certainly it will rise this year with many, many more people. The only thing to do is just not to send presents, and your friends will thoroughly understand.

Perhaps a good thing to do is to write charming Christmas notes to your friends. This would be less "sudden" than just sending Christmas cards, and in the note you would make your Christmas wishes and your warm feeling of friendship so compelling and gracious that your friends will enthusiastically welcome this "spiritual gift."

A Name

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have recently married a man who divorced his wife, and who has a little daughter seven years of age. I am 35 and have a boy in a military school. I have always wanted a little daughter of my own, and as I will never have a daughter of my own, I would like to gain this sweet little girl's affection, yet I find myself bewildered. I don't want to be selfish. We have her at our home week-ends. We have had her out twice so far. The first time she was shy and acted very rude (this, however, was not due to the child herself).

Last week she was entirely different. She was so sweet and nice and seemed to enjoy being with us.

What name should she call me by under these circumstances?

READER.

To my mind, there is no better or easier form of name, under these circumstances than the use of Aunt with the first name . . . Aunt Mary. She certainly can't and should not call you "Mother," and for her to call you Mrs. Graham is fairly inappropriate. So the form that I suggest seems to get around the question extremely well.

Contract Bridge

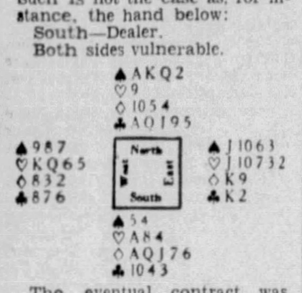
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Inducing a Losing Finesse

Judging from letters I receive, some readers make the mistake of assuming that the players of the hands used to illustrate these articles had the benefit of seeing all the cards—in other words, to use a technical phrase, they played Double Dummy. Such is not the case as, for instance, the hand below:

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The eventual contract was three notrump. Looking at all four hands, it is easy to see that a Small Slam may be made in either diamonds or clubs, but the South player was rather proud of the way he handled notrump contracts, so insisted on that contract. In addition, the Slam contract is not so easily reached, due to the fact that neither North nor South has adequate trump support for the partner's only fairly strong suit. It is equally evident that South can easily make his notrump contract with an overtrick, if he selects the correct suit to finesse, as between clubs and diamonds. One finesse is a winner; the other is a loser. In cases where it is a pure guess, the Declarer has little to guide him.

The Opening lead was the heart 5, and South decided to hold up the Ace until the third round. On the first round, East played the Ten and returned his original fourth-best, the 3. This West won with the Queen. West now knew that East held the Knave with the 7 and probably the deuce, and South must have the Ace to have bid notrump. West therefore returned the heart King. To return the 6 would block East from making 2 heart tricks. When South was forced to win the third round of hearts, he had a blind guess between finessing clubs or diamonds. East had watched all of the cards very carefully, and knew, of course, that his partner's last heart was the 6. Hoping to guide the Declarer into a wrong choice of a finesse, East brilliantly played the heart Knave under West's King to make it appear possible that he had no hearts remaining, and thus induced South to finesse the clubs. The stratagem worked and South was defeated 1 trick.

South cannot be blamed for falling a victim to East's play, as even without it he had nothing but a guess to guide him in deciding between the finesse of a diamond and the finesse of a club. If he guessed right, he made game. If he guessed wrong, he was set.

Today's Question

What is the correct Opening bid and how high should the bidding have gone, without support from partner, on the following hand?

♠A ♡J ◇AKQJ1096 ♣J952

Answer: The correct bid on the above hand is one diamond, as the hand is not quite strong enough for a four diamond Opening bid, which requires 9 playing-tricks, vulnerable or not vulnerable, and the above hand contains only 2 playing-tricks.

The principle of the above bid lies in the fact that the partner would have to have some strength in order to make game which he will show over a one bid.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

A Telegram Arrives from Owen to Brixton

Sam Brixton's bulky body sprang from his chair as Dr. Barnes said, "I think this is your telegram, Mr. Brixton."

"All right, I'll take it," he said hastily, reaching out his hand for the telephone.

But the suave, poised head of Whitney Hall was equal to the emergency. From the story Dicky had told him, he knew how vital it was that we should permit no activity of Samuel Brixton's or his half-brother's to go unnoticed if it were possible to check it, and he made no slightest movement to surrender the telephone receiver. Instead, his delicately surprised look gave the subtle impression that he considered Mr. Brixton's request a breach of good breeding.

"If you wish to avoid publicity," he said courteously, but firmly, "it will be exceedingly unwise for your voice to come over a telephone from here at this time in the morning. I will take the message down verbatim, and the young woman will think it is for someone who will arrive tomorrow."

He had spoken softly, with his hand held over the mouthpiece. Without even looking at the other man for permission, he took his hand away and spoke directly to the operator.

"Give me the message, please," he said. "I will see that the right person gets it."

Samuel Brixton muttered something beneath his breath, but his wife put her hand upon his arm, and he thereafter sat quietly as Dr. Barnes wrote down the message from the operator's dictation. At last it was ended, and then repeated at the doctor's request. But even then he did not surrender to Samuel Brixton the message he had written for him.

"I write a shocking hand," he murmured apologetically. "I would better read this to you."

READ ALOUD

If there had been room for any mirth in my system, I could have laughed aloud at the baffled expression upon Sam Brixton's face at this cool announcement. He did not dare offer any objection to our hearing the message, but I knew that he was furious, and what else—afraid? I did not know, but I surmised much as he said huskily:

"That's oke by me. Shoot."

If Dr. Barnes' eyebrows arched themselves ever so slightly at the familiarity, Sam Brixton did not know it, and the message was read out slowly and distinctly so that I was able to memorize it from the one reading.

"Terribly upset your news," it said. "Would join you immediately, but physician here forbids leaving bed for two or three days. Have been ill last few days. Have not notified you as not serious though troublesome. Minute it is safe to come I will join you. In meantime should advise little publicity as possible. CHARLES."

"The message was marked 'rush,'" Dr. Barnes added, and I think each of us added the mental comment that Charles Owens had been careless of expense, whether from genuine perturbation or with purpose—for effect.

"It would be," Sam Brixton said hastily. "Charlie's a sure nut on long rush telegrams; uses 'em instead of letters. What do you think, Helena? Shall we go over to the hotel and try to rest a bit, as long as there's nothing to be done until that message comes. That's what you said, wasn't it?" as he turned with thinly curbed belligerence to Dr. Barnes.

RONALD ARRIVES

"Absolutely nothing," Dr. Barnes returned. And when I thought of the activities that Harry Underwood and Dicky had planned for daybreak, and of the presence on the scene, unsuspected by the Brixtons, of Hugh Grantland, I realized how wholeheartedly the astute head of Whitney Hall was furthering our plans.

"Oh! I couldn't sleep," Helena began, just as Lucy came into the room with a service of hot coffee, hot broth, crackers and hot buttered toast similar to the one she had provided for us.

"But you can rest a little, after you have had something hot," Mrs. Barnes said smoothingly; and under her urging and Lillian's, Helena swallowed enough of the broth and coffee to revive her.

But her husband, whose spirits had risen perceptibly since the telegram from his half-brother, made up for her abstinence.

"You'll come with me to the hotel, Lillian?" Helena pleaded when they had finished, and Lillian acquiesced, but flashed a significant glance at me as she did so.

"Send Harry over as soon as he comes in," she said, and I nodded, knowing that when he made that trip to the Sacketts-ville Inn, Lillian would return with him to the school as soon as she could get away from the espionage of her friends.

"And Ronald—" Helena added, but as if she had summoned him, a knock at the side corridor door disclosed Ronald, hatless and breathless, under Wynne's escort.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A far cry from Wyoming or Nevada to Paris, but it can be heard in the sartorial world. Chanel makes a suit of brown wide-wale corduroy and trims it with a jeweled and studded belt that is reminiscent of that worn by our cowboys.

A grand assortment of fashions is to be found in the section devoted to evening wraps. Although long, slim wraps are the mode, one sees plenty of capelets. A charming model is done in rose pink velvet with shirring all over. It has a demure turn-down collar and pink velvet bow.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Breakfast Important for School Children

In recent years there has been much discussion about the value of hot luncheons for school children. Many of our modern schools are so equipped that the school child can have a hot dish at noon-time. This is a good thing, of course, but I think too little has been said about the importance of breakfast for the growing child.

Dr. Copeland

The practice of rushing through the morning meal, grabbing coffee and toast at breakfast time is all too common in this country. Children who see the grown-ups of the family eating breakfast in this manner naturally are tempted to do likewise.

This meal should be at the appointed time every morning. The child should be awakened at an early hour so that he will have ample time to attend to his daily toilet and to dress in leisure. When he is seated at the table he should know there is plenty of time to eat slowly and deliberately. The youngster should never be sent off to school unless he has partaken of a good substantial breakfast.

Eating breakfast in the proper manner is a habit that should be taught every child. It can only be acquired by beginning early to carefully regulate this first meal of the day.

The breakfast should consist of fruit or orange juice, a hot cereal, an egg, toast and milk. Children should not be given coffee or tea. In cold weather a hot beverage, such as hot chocolate or some other similar preparation, may be given.

The importance of a good breakfast for every school child cannot be overestimated. It makes for health and for mental progress. It has been found that children who go to school with empty stomachs are backward in their growth and brain development. They are incapable of giving the necessary attention to their studies.

The energy required for good school work cannot be supplied without the eating of the right food. Bear in mind that mental fatigue is similar in its causes to physical fatigue and can be prevented by proper nourishment.

The child who is well nourished is healthy and happy. He makes good grades in school work and school appeals to him. The child who is ill or undernourished is not happy and rarely makes the desired strides in his work.

If you are not satisfied with the report of your child, check up on his breakfast. Encourage the eating of cereals or a hot plate at breakfast time. A good breakfast has often been described as a meal "that sticks to the ribs and lasts all morning."

You and Your Child's School

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Parents often remind me of a friend of mine who put off consulting an oculist for years, for fear he'd find something wrong with her eyes. In other words, she suspected the bad news, but didn't want to hear it. Similarly, parents often suspect a weakness in their child, ask a teacher if it truly is so, and get highly indignant if she says "Yes."

A mother visited her son's classroom recently with the avowed purpose of sighting his thin spots, so she could help build them up. Yet she came home indignant and resentful because the teacher had hinted as delicately and kindly as possible that the child didn't know how to work, had never been taught to concentrate, but was a victim to every passing noise or irrelevant interest.

Well, what had the mother expected? She suspected this. In fact, she was downright sure that the boy couldn't light on any one interest long enough to do justice to it, for he didn't at home. What, then, had she expected to learn? What had she expected of the school, the teacher?

It is indeed strange that we can't face and consider impersonally the faults of our children, for only in acknowledging them can we help the child. Yet just let someone corroborate our own suspicions, and all the animal instincts of fierce protection flame up; we lose all logical, thinking perspective.

You can help your child a great deal if you visit his school with an open mind, if you observe how he reacts to his group, whether or not he plays fair, obeys rules, gives way sometimes to the other fellow, is attentive or distracted when the teacher assigns lessons.

But you must be openminded, for a visit to school made with the sole idea of championing your child is going to do him more harm than good.

Household Hints

Dip the knife blade in boiling water before cutting rich cheese and you will be able to cut even thin slices without the cheese sticking to the knife.

Bacon that is properly cured should have a slight tinge of pink in the fat. This is caused by the action of the salt, and if the fat is colorless the bacon is apt to be insipid. Bacon with yellow streaks in the fat should be avoided.

Pewterware needs special cleansing treatment. Try soaking it in warm soda water, and while the metal is hot scrub it with a soft brush dipped in fine silver sand. Dip each piece in clear cold water, put into another vessel and wipe dry, or, if not bright enough, rub with a flannel moistened with some hard soap and then polish with a dry flannel.

Listening In On Radio Gossip

Finnette Walker, CBS television star and wife of Teddy Bergman, CBS actor, has deserted the broadcasting studios temporarily to appear in the new Broadway operetta, "Music In the Air" . . . Elizabeth Barthell has started keeping trim by taking a brisk three-mile walk every afternoon. . . . Announcers Andre Baruch and Fred Uttal seem to have become unofficial members of Mrs. Ora Nichols' staff of sound-effects experts. Andre has been ringing bells and slamming doors on a dramatic sketch, while Fred has become a past master at imitating the sounds of meat grinders, frying foods and simmering pots on Ida Bailey Allen's "Round the World Cooking School" program.

Miss Barthell

Radio fans, so say reports, have been driven to distraction trying to decipher the code messages that precede the Magic Carpet dramatizations . . . There's not a dot or dash of meaning to them . . .

WILD CARGO -:- -:- By FRANK BUCK With EDWARD ANTHONY

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

When the fad for snakeskin shoes, handbags, etc., hit the United States and European countries it meant a new meal ticket for many natives of Asiatic countries, particularly those dwelling in that tremendous stretch of marshy lowlands—with an area of several hundred square miles — that spreads out like a huge mudpie on the east coast of Borneo, south of Sandaken. Here one finds by the thousands the variety of non-poisonous fresh-water snake whose brownish dotted skin has been converted into so many "novelties" and so many ladies' shoetops. Whole native villages turned out, when the craze first started, to find the gold in them thar marshes. Some made their captures with nets made of jungle fibers, others used forked sticks, while the more primitive Borneans, disdaining finesse, merely banged Mr. Snakeskin-Bag-to-Be over the head with a club.

Beginning about six years ago, the natives found the snake business a most profitable source of revenue. Overproduction, which can even find its way to the marshy wastes of Borneo, dealt the snake-skin business a kick in the shins in 1929, and, while this product of the swamps still give the villagers an income, it is as nothing compared with the good old days. Whether conditions are fundamentally sound and the snake business is merely undergoing a house-cleaning that will make for a better deal all around in the future, I do not know. I hope so; for while Americans and Europeans may not need the snake skins, the natives need the money.

ASKED TO BUY SKINS

Perhaps even now some Borneo wizard of the chart-and-graph—some dauntless interpreter of the hills and valleys of upward and downward trends—is trying to sooth Sandaken's unemployed by showing that as soon as people use up their present supply of snakeskin shoes and bags, buying will begin again.

When I was in that part of the world a few years ago, I was offered a bale of 20,000 snake skins at 20 cents apiece by a Dutch trader who had begun to suffer from the prevailing overproduction. When I declined, explaining that I was interested only in live snakes, he was puzzled. Why should anyone want a live snake?

The trader, in an effort to make a customer of me, bought me a drink and beguiled me with stories of local snake-catching. His favorite tale—and one that has become a legend in the district—has to do with a boy and girl, who, at the height of the snake-skin boom, were out gathering snakes in the marshes. Those were the days when children worked side by side with adults to help supply the sudden demand for this strange commodity.

The youthful pair (the boy was 14 and the girl 12) were sloshing through the swamps in quest of better pickings, when they came to deeper water. As they reached a point where it was necessary to wade knee-deep, the boy slung his bag of snakes across his shoulder and gave his sister his hand so that she might step from rock to rock in the water.

SAVED HIS SISTER

As they moved along in this fashion, a crocodile suddenly appeared and with one of those powerful blows, capable of felling a 350-pound tapir, struck the little girl viciously with its tail, sending her spinning into the water. A few seconds later, with the child in its jaws, the reptile was heading for deeper waters.

The boy threw away his bag of snakes and went in pursuit. Quickly reaching the point where the crocodile was dragging his sister down into eight feet of water, he dove downward head-first while agonized natives who were gathering snakes nearby shrieked warnings and begged him not to attempt his sister's rescue, for that would only mean two deaths instead of one.

Somehow the boy managed to land on the monster's back, and not many seconds afterwards the natives were astounded by the sight of the reptile rising to the surface with the boy's legs securely locked around its body and his thumbs gouging out its eyes. The crocodile, blinded, relaxed its jaws and let the little girl go. The boy dragged her out of the water and got her back to the compound. Though badly maimed, she survived.

The little boy became a hero, according to the trader and, now a youth of about 18, was still the idol of the natives. Would I care to meet him? The young man would tell me the story himself—as would also the natives who had witnessed his heroic feat.

I was forced to decline, not caring to obligate myself to a man who was trying to sell me a commodity for which I had no use. I wished him luck with his snake skins, bought him a drink and was off in quest of the reptiles that had brought me to this district.

The orang-utan often constitutes a meal-ticket for the natives along the north and west coasts of Borneo and up in the river settlements in the interior. There is always a trader who is willing to pay a good price for one.

When the orangs make their periodic raids on the durian and jackfruit trees that are an invariable feature of any settlement in those parts, the natives watch carefully for a mother and child of the species.

The mother, in such a situation, is the victim of a blow-gun or a spear, and the youngster is captured. If it is a babe it is placed under the care of one of the nursing mothers of the village. It is not an unusual sight in these primitive districts to see a mother nursing her own child on one breast and an infant orang on the other.

BUYS TAME ORANG

Orangs raised in a compound from babyhood are very tame and bring a good price. They grow up with the children of the village who enjoy the zestful participation of these animals in their games.

Some years ago I turned up at a Dyak village in quest of a tame orang suitable for stage work in the vaudeville theaters. I had been tipped off about a fine tame specimen that had been raised from infancy with one of the native families. I located the Dyak who owned this animal and soon learned that I had not been misinformed. It was a fine healthy young animal, about four or five years old, measuring in height about 24 inches "in a sitting position," which is the professional method of measuring apes.

During my negotiations for this orang with its Dyak owner I stood where I could see this animal playing a game (a sort of Asiatic "tag") with a number of small children. The effect on the children was instantaneous when the Dyak father broke up the game by taking hold of the playful animal and placing it in an old shipping box which we had converted into a cage by adding a barred front.

CHILDREN QUIETED

The children knew something was wrong, although it took them a few minutes to grasp the full significance of what was taking place. When they realized that their little playmate was about to be taken from them they set up a great wailing. This their father regarded as foolish sentimentality, a fact which he emphasized by brandishing a stick at them.

I wanted this orang, but I had no desire to break up a happy home; so I asked the Dyak if he was quite sure he wanted to sell. He was amazed at what I said, obviously considering me silly for paying any attention to the children. He went on to remind me that we had closed the deal and that he didn't think it fair of me to back out now. Relieved, I paid for the animal and prepared to leave with it, aided by natives with carrying poles.

Again the children crowded round. Their father, now he had his money, had lost interest in me and gone about his business. I distributed new pennies, bright-colored beads and jack knives among them, with miraculous results.

At once they were joyful, gleefully showing each other their presents. In fact, they forgot their orang-utan pal completely, dashing off to show another group of children their treasures and failing, as we made our departure, to make any reply at all to the little animal as it stuck one arm through the bars and waved in an effort to get their attention.

HOCKEY LOOP LEADERS TO FACE TESTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—A week-end schedule of four games will bring out every National Hockey League club except the New York Americans and New York Rangers whose playing home, Madison Square Garden, will be given over to the six-day bicycle racers.

The Toronto Maple Leafs, Stanley Cup champions, will engage in two battles, taking on the Montreal Maroons at Toronto tonight and the Detroit Red Wings at Detroit tomorrow. The other two games, pitting Boston against Ottawa, at Ottawa, and Chicago against Les Canadiens at Montreal, will be played tonight.

A complete shift in the standings is a distinct possibility. Boston setting the pace in the American section with seven points, will need to win to protect its lead against Detroit and Chicago, tied for second place with six points.

Toronto, now tied with the Americans for the interhational section lead with five points, finds Ottawa and the Maroons a trifle too close behind. Ottawa and the Maroons have four points each.

WINDSOR VICTOR

WINDSOR, Ontario, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—The Windsor Bulldogs eked out a 1-to-0 overtime decision over Buffalo in a fast International Hockey League contest here last night.

After the teams had battled through three scoreless periods, Simpson, of Windsor, decided the issue when he took a pass from Brown and beat Goalie Taugher in 4 minutes and 12 seconds of the overtime period.

CLEVELAND ROUTED

LONDON, Ontario, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—London buried Cleveland under a 4-to-1 count in an International Hockey League game here last night.

Cleveland was first to score, Ingram taking a pass from Daley halfway through the opening period to tally the visitors' only goal. London evened it before the period was over, went into the lead in the second period and then clinched the decision with two more goals in the closing session.

GIBSON TO MAKE HOME HERE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Pirate Pilot George Gibson is due to reach Pittsburgh over the week-end. The Buccaneer manager is coming here to make his home for the winter, Gibby and his employers sharing the belief that he should be around each day so that there can be a full representation of the officials when big problems come up.

Gibby is eager to make a deal or two. Apparently he wants to diversify the left-hand attack of the Pirates by inserting in the lineup a right-hand socker with a punch. Outfielder Fred Lindstrom is one player desired, and Gibby also would like to do business on the Chick Hafey basis, but now that Donie Bush has been made manager of the Reds it will be doubly difficult for any rival club to acquire the de luxe slugger.

Gibson, President William E. Benswanger and Vice President Sam Watters will represent the Pittsburgh club at the minor league meetings to be held in Columbus during the week of December 4.

CHILLYSAUCE

Steve Swetonic, Pirate star of the mound, was a somewhat feverish spectator at Forbes Field as the Dukes clashed with the Genevans Thanksgiving Day.

Steve has witnessed practically every big grid contest in the city this year, but he breaks out in a rash of interest whenever his Panther alma mater is engaged. The mound artist is convinced that Pitt is the best team in the land.

Tom Davies, former Panther who also was a star diamond performer, joined up with Swetonic and Pirate President William E. Benswanger, as did Catcher George Susce, Oakland boy who is the baseball property of the Detroit Americans. Davies' football coaching at the University of Rochester is supplemented by his baseball and basketball coaching. He says he has a couple of pitchers who may make the major league grade.

The departure of Jewel Ens from Detroit is hard to understand when one hears so many compliments from American Leaguers regarding the former Pirate pilot. It seems, however, that the Detroit owners were extremely eager to augment their strategy board through the acquisition of Del Baker, former Tiger catcher who has been piloting the Beaumont club of the Texas League. Beaumont is a Detroit farm and Baker has groomed several youngsters of promise for the major league outfit.

It would not be surprising were Ens to attach himself to some National League club. Bill McKechnie and Donie Bush are two pilots who like the work and actions of the tow-haired St. Louisan.

Mrs. Mack Loses In Auto Suit

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Katherine A. McGillicuddy, wife of Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, yesterday was defendant in an automobile accident suit—and lost a decision for $1,495.

Mrs. McGillicuddy was not in court, but her daughter, Ruth, 17, was.

Ruth stated she was driving when the crash occurred, but said the second driver was at fault.

Quoting from Chapter One, Deuteronomy, of the Fifth Book of Moses, he said:

"Hear the cause between your brethren and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him. Ye shall not respect persons in judgment."

The jury returned a verdict after an hour in favor of the complainants, Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Phillips. Five hundred dollars was for Mrs. Phillips' injuries and $995 for a new car.

Son's Ring Work Pleases Old Mike Gibbons

ST. PAUL, Nov. 26.—(AP.)—If young Jack Gibbons follows his dad's advice he won't fight to please the gallery. Old Mike said:

"I never want him to please those guys in the gallery. I never did."

His dad was pleased, he said, with the 20-year-old youngster's showing in winning his first professional fight as a middleweight in four rounds last night against Al Paul, of St. Paul.

His comment on the gallery was inspired after the bout during which the fans upstairs booed the fighters, apparently for young Gibbons' failure to put Paul away after almost knocking him out with a right uppercut in the third round.

M'EWAN LOSES LEGAL TILT

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—The slowly grinding wheels of the law court will prevent Capt. John J. McEwan, suspended Holy Cross football coach from directing the play of his Purple-clad Crusaders in today's objective clash with the Boston College Eagles.

Several days ago McEwan, former coach at West Point and Oregon, asked the Superior Court to restrain the college authorities from preventing him from carrying out his contracted football duties. Yesterday, by an agreement of counsel, McEwan's application for a preliminary injunction was discontinued by Judge Winfred H. Whiting, who ordered pleadings in the case to be ready before December 12, when the case will be given a court hearing.

McEwan, now in his second year of a three-year contract as Holy Cross coach, was suspended about three weeks ago after his team lost its first game of the season to Brown, of Providence. College authorities ordered him to suspend his activities after he engaged in a dispute with Bart Sullivan, track coach and football trainer for more than 20 years.

The incident that led to the friction happened in the third period of the Brown-Holy Cross game when the Bruins were pressing on to their winning touchdown. McEwan ordered Sullivan to replace a player and, when the trainer refused, the coach charged him with "mutiny."

W. Va. Adds Temple To 1933 Grid Card

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov 26.—Temple University's football team will be played on Friday night, October 20, at Philadelphia next year by West Virginia, Harry A. Stansbury, director of athletics, announced today.

Addition of Temple to the 1933 gridiron schedule brings the number of games definitely carded to five. Other contests previously announced include:

September 23—Washington and Lee at Charleston.

September 29 — Duquesne at Pittsburgh.

October 7—Pittsburgh at Morgantown.

October 14—Fordham at New York.

Thus far Fordham is the only new opponent announced for the 1933 university eleven and it is likely that the remaining dates may be filled entirely by teams which were met this year.

Waite High Gets Bid to Miami

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 26.—(AP.)—Coach Don McCallister said yesterday a decision on an invitation for Waite High School to play a post-season football game in Miami, Fla., on Christmas Day, will be made next Wednesday.

He received a telegram from W. R. Thomas, principal of Miami High School, saying definite announcement of the game would be made November 30.

THREE WOMEN

A Story of the Conflicting Natures Of Different Generations

By FAITH BALDWIN

CHAPTER XXXII.

Van Alstyne looked at his watch.

"Do you mind getting on now?"

"Where are you staying?"

"At the Lamberts'. I'm only over here for a short time, on business, really."

"But you haven't any!" objected Joyce, setting the car in motion.

"Not exactly. Lately, though, I've been restless doing so little, have amused myself financing small schemes here and there. Came over, in fact, to set a young Englishman up for himself. Your father knew his mother. She was Sally Morgan, we were all in school together."

"What's his name?"

"Basil Staines. He's a younger son. Since the war the Staines family has been up against it, in that quiet English way. Basil is 22 now, Julien a year older. There's a younger sister. The financial affairs of the family are not very flourishing at present. Basil is just down from Oxford, and we decided he might make a go of it over here."

"Staines—I remember the name. Yvonne Harkness knew them. The mother is American, didn't you say?"

"Yes. She's not changed much from the girl we knew; we adored her at school—we do still——"

"I don't like young men," said Joyce irrelevantly.

Van Alstyne laughed.

"Thanks. Basil isn't young, exactly, if that's what you mean. It's a very sophisticated generation, this post-war one. His father, by the way, was all through the mess—in the thick of it. And badly cut up. He's rather an invalid now, always will be."

TELLS ELIZABETH

Presently they were at Four Corners. Joyce stopped the car, Van Alstyne got out, and the Airedale jumped over the door, a tawny flash, and ran, barking, down the road.

"Then I won't see you again?" Joyce asked.

"Child, what gloomy forebodings. I'm in excellent health. I shall be at the Plaza for a matter of six weeks or more. I leave for town tomorrow. Will you telephone me at the hotel? I'd like to see you, we could lunch or tea or something. Don't think me an idiot if I say I cannot call at your home. Now, will you telephone me?"

She promised, and then drove home thoughtfully. Should she say that she had seen him? But how ridiculous. Why shouldn't she say so? Oh, how incredible people were!

An undefined instinct, protective in its essence, led Joyce to mention her meeting with Van Alstyne to her mother at a time when they were alone for a moment before dinner. She said, very casually, "I saw Uncle Fred on the road today, up by Sunrise Hill. He was walking and I had stopped the car."

SURPRISING NEWS

Elizabeth looked up from her magazine, mildly puzzled. She repeated "Uncle Fred?" on an interrogative note, mentally surveying a long list of quasi uncles, cousins, distant relatives.

"Van Alstyne, Uncle Fred Van Alstyne," explained Joyce patiently.

Elizabeth had never been able to control her changing color. It was one of her charms. The bright flush rose now, flooding her small face to the roots of her hair. She said, "oh—" in a tiny, stifled voice.

Joyce turned her eyes away.

"He'll be going back soon, he's only here on a short visit," she said, hurriedly.

She waited. Elizabeth said nothing. Neither the entirely natural, when is he coming over? nor the less to be expected but nevertheless, considering her silence, equally consistent, did he speak—of me?

Louisa came into the room, glanced from one to the other. Dinner was announced, they went to the table. Several times, in the course of the general conversation conducted by the elder Mrs. Sheldon, Joyce fancied that her mother looked at her appealingly. She replied to that unspoken, perhaps fancied, petition by saying nothing to her grandmother of her meeting with Van Alstyne. She couldn't bring the words over her lips, to her own amazement. She kept that conspiratorial silence and, just before they rose from the table, she heard her grandmother say, evenly, "I understand that Fred Van Alstyne has been in the neighborhood for a few days."

Looking up from her plate Joyce saw Louisa's eyes fixed upon Elizabeth with such cool malice, such deliberate amusement, that the girl caught her breath. She heard her mother murmur something in answer, but she herself said nothing. Now, of course, was the moment in which she might say . . . Oh, yes, I saw him, spoke with him, was just about to tell you.

But she did not say it then and afterwards, it was too late.

In that moment of silence Joyce allied herself with her mother, and against her grandmother. It was unspoken between them, a situation from which each averted her eyes, but it was there, it had happened.

"A pity," Louisa was continuing smoothly, "that he could not spare the time to call upon old friends. Perhaps he has forgotten us. How long is it since we have seen him, Elizabeth—eight years—nine years?"

"Eight—"

"Yes. Well, it is evident that Fred has lost touch with many of his earlier contacts. He has become quite expatriated, I understand."

She went on, inventing a life for Van Alstyne. Elizabeth sat quite still, the color shamefully coming and going in her face. Joyce listened with a simulated air of boredom as one who should say . . . what's all this to me? I haven't seen the man since childhood and these historical reminiscences do not interest me.

A ghastly meal. Joyce rose from the table with definite relief. Later, playing bridge at a neighbor's, she pondered on the incident. It was evident that her grandmother knew of the Van Alstyne affair. How much? Had her knowledge had anything to do with Elizabeth's unexplained about-face?

A NEW UNDERSTANDING

She could not free her mind of the thought that it had, that her grandmother had, in some way, for some reason, been an important factor in Elizabeth's decision. She was convinced that Mrs. Sheldon's remarks that evening had been deeply, maliciously motivated. This conclusion threw an entirely different light upon both Louisa and Elizabeth. Joyce had always taken it for granted that her grandmother was fond of Elizabeth Sheldon, in a cool, undemonstrative way. She treated her like a child, of course, sometimes like a tiresome child, always like a child who must be guided, protected.

Now, Joyce wondered. Wondering, something of her admiration for her grandmother was tarnished. It seemed to the girl so small, so beneath the older woman, to strike a person deliberately, a person not equipped to strike back.

What, she asked herself, could lie behind her grandmother's calculated references to Van Alstyne?

WATCHES WOMEN

She found herself watching, as time went on, the relations of the two women and her eyes gradually opened to the recurrent, trivial encounters between them; encounters in which Elizabeth was always worsted, always at fault, always, as it were, deliberately displayed in attitudes of almost childish absurdity.

Joyce grew angry for her mother and angry at her. Irritated. Why doesn't she answer back? Why doesn't she stand up to her? Why is she always meek and mild and frightened?

Dimly, she began to regard the two elder women as enemies in secret, as perpetual, and always unequal, adversaries.

The Sheldons returned to town early in the season. Joyce, a little oppressed spiritually from the unanswered questions which had been assailing her, went toward her work with an absorbed ardor. She liked everything about it, the daily sum of knowledge, the professors, the students. She felt very much alone, very free, somehow.

Yvonne had been married late in August. Joyce, who had met and liked the Hon. Reginald prior to the wedding, missed her friend greatly. Not alone the knowledge that Yvonne was leaving her to live in England depressed her, but the inalienable fact that Yvonne had already left her, completely and forever, long before her physical departure. Joyce was far too fine fibered to wish to intrude upon Yvonne's secrecies. But she had always the sense that Yvonne had withdrawn her essential self from her friend, that they were no longer upon common ground, for all that Yvonne still gave her an unaltered affection and superficial confidence.

MEETS FRED AGAIN

Joyce had forgotten her promise to telephone Van Alstyne, although she had by no means forgotten the man himself. She speculated upon him endlessly, in contemplating the, to her, quite new mystery of her mother. One afternoon, late in the autumn, she met him walking unconcernedly down Fifth avenue.

"You never called me!"

"I've been so busy!"

"I know. Look here, I'm sailing very soon. It's not too late for a cup of tea, is it? I'm meeting Basil Staines at the Ritz —" As she hesitated, he added, "Will they scold you for coming home late?"

She grinned, the little boy grin her friends loved, and nodded.

"Possibly. Probably, in fact. What of it? I had early classes today, but they don't know that. Let's go!"

They walked on together.

"Shall I like your Basil?" Joyce asked.

"He's a charming boy."

"Oh—boy!" she repeated, disdainfully. "I told you I didn't like boys!"

"He's not, really. You'll understand when you meet him. Englishmen look younger than our young men, somehow, and seem a thousand years older."

"I don't like Englishmen, either—not very much."

"What—whom—do you like, Miss Difficult?"

She pondered, answered frankly.

"I don't know. I've tried to fall in love since I was 14."

"Without success?"

"No—well, yes, comparatively speaking."

She wanted to say—you've been in love with my mother. Tell me, how did you know, how were you sure?

She couldn't, of course. Yet she would have liked to have heard his answer. But men were more reticent, even, than women. She remembered that Hugh Masterson had said to her, "If you loved me, you'd know it." Well, Hugh had thought that he loved her, had loved her. She was sure of that much. Now he was married and people spoke of him with that curious, tolerant, half-contempt. Masterson? Oh, perfectly mad about his wife! He'd forgotten her, Joyce, then. What if he'd married her and missed what he now had. Or would he have missed it? Could you love many times, equally, each time really, with all your heart?

She thought not. She thought—I haven't much use for it. She spoke aloud, unconsciously, "There ain't no such animal!"

"Shall I like your Basil?" asked Joyce.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Jimmy, as he is known to all his playmates likes the "drumstick" of the turkey and his mother, Mrs. Margaret Carson has promised him a turkey birthday dinner tonight and also that he can have both "drumsticks" of his turkey.

And, of course, with the turkey will go all the trimmings—mashed potatoes, dressing, or as Jimmy calls it, the concealment, peas, home-made cup-cakes, cranberry sauce and gravy.

The highlight of the day, however, will be when a great big chocolate cake with six bright red candles on it, is placed before little Jimmy. After trying to blow out the candles all at once, Jimmy will have the honor of cutting his own cake.

His sister, Betty, and Charles Hodgetts will be the only guests and after the feast the youngsters will examine Jimmie's presents and play games until it's time for the sandman to visit all tired little boys and girls.

Jimmie, by the way, is a member of the Kenyon Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club and attends all the meetings regularly each Saturday morning.

RECORD ATTENDANCE

Speaking of the Saturday morning meetings, the attendance today reached a record number and the lobbies of the 16 Warner theaters, where the club meets each Saturday, were filled to overflowing with the stockings the members brought for Santa Claus to fill.

Join at any of the Warner Theaters where the Junior Komic Club meets each Saturday morning, or send your name and address, name of your parents, date and year of your birth, school you attend, to the secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a membership card and button will be mailed to you.

Too Many Marchers Spoil the Parade

We can hardly approve of 50,000 people in a beer parade.

While recognizing the malted symptoms, being thoroughly conversant with the vaccine and sympathetic with the line of march, we claim that it is a loss and sacrifice of individuality.

He allied himself with no protest organizations, political scrambles or indignation circuses. His habits were non-partisan.

And when he got ready to march, he marched. Sometimes, it was voluntary. Sometimes, by request.

His start was slow. More men were bogged down in the sawdust of Philadelphia than in the mud of Flanders.

We can still picture the oldtimer as he got ready to parade past a given point. He would give his derby a flip to the side of his head.

Then he would hone his lapels to a sharp point. After marking time for a few minutes he would aim himself at the swinging doors and march out six abreast.

His close order formations and full dress drilling were mostly on the diagonal. He had trouble preserving his alignment while turning corners as he could never make up his mind whether he was a file closer or the pivot man.

Outside of an occasional clutch at a lamppost or a steadying fire plug he was at the mercy of the winds.

He never charged straight ahead like the 600 at Bakalava. He was more like a mosquito boat at Barnegat Bay. He got there by tacking.

But he was a proud sight as he came down the old home street, bowing and smiling to the cheers of the neighbors' children. He was proud, handsome and chivalrous. He could have spotted King Arthur three full laps in an Australian pursuit race on the rim of the round table.

He has been gathered to his bartenders these many years. We shall never see his like again. But he did not live in vain for he proved that one man is a parade.

Good Advice Is Needed

The County Should Hesitate to "Institutionalize" Children—Brief Comment on Local News.

Shocking as are the revelations concerning the system under which the county's juvenile wards are "farmed out" to families at $5.60 a week per child, it does not necessarily follow that the only remedy is to build a "home"—an institution—for the children, as proposed by County Commissioners C. M. Barr and W. D. Mansfield. Certainly good advice should be sought before embarking on any such policy.

There are a number of social service agencies in the county, such as the Children's Service Bureau and the Children's Aid Society, whose views on this subject should be obtained. Social service workers as a rule are opposed to putting children in institutions if it can possibly be avoided. They may be able to tell the County Commissioners how it can be avoided.

Commissioner C. C. McGovern expresses the opinion that there are good homes in the county where the county's wards would be welcomed and well treated, and enough of them to take care of all the children. Finding the right kind of homes, McGovern sensibly remarks, is a matter of administration by the proper personnel. Because with inefficient personnel the system has worked unsatisfactorily it does not necessarily follow that it is better to "institutionalize" the children.

The annual sale of Christmas Seals started in Pittsburgh yesterday. These attractive stamps, to be attached to Christmas packages and holiday mail, are bullets in the warfare against tuberculosis, and everybody should buy as many of them as possible. The proceeds of the air show to be held at Rodgers Field Sunday are to be added to the Christmas Seal fund, which is an additional reason for attending it.

Mrs. W. A. Amos, wife of the rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, calls attention to another way in which to be helpful. She suggests that Golden Rule Week (December 11-18) be observed by a genuine sacrificial sharing with someone less fortunate. A family of five, Mrs. Amos says, can be fed satisfactorily for a week at a total cost of $8.88. She proposes that the difference between that sum and what the family would normally spend be devoted to charity.

A wild deer was killed in Pittsburgh some time Friday night. Struck by a train, its body was found in the Panhandle Division tunnel between Corliss and Ingram yesterday. This is an answer to the question if the state's deer "population" has been seriously depleted by last year's slaughter of 24,796 bucks and 70,255 deer without antlers, a total of 95,051.

With deer so abundant that they are hunted in the suburbs and even wander into the city itself, it is hard to realize that when the Board of Game Commissioners was created in 1895 deer were so rare in Pennsylvania that the appearance of one caused much comment. They probably would have become extinct in a few years if strict protective laws had not been passed.

Deer are safe from extermination in Pennsylvania. The numerous game sanctuaries, where they may not be hunted even in the open season, make that certain. The chief problem now is to keep the number down to a level at which they will not seriously damage the crops of farmers. Up until last year many deer starved to death because there was not enough forage in the woods to provide for all.

The Public Service Commission is confronted with an important case in the complaint of the Pittsburgh Railways Company against the plan of the Community Transportation Company and the Community Service Association to furnish bus service at a reasonable rate between Pittsburgh and the suburbs. The case will bring before the commission again the injustice of the 25-cent bus fare charged by the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, a railways subsidiary.

The Pittsburgh Railways Company contends that the Community Service Association's co-operative arrangement is merely a disguise under which the association is to operate as a common carrier. If the Public Service Commission should uphold that view, the fair thing would be to give the association a license and let it operate as a common carrier.

Pittsburgh has suffered too long already from the existing situation, in which the railways company is given a monopoly of the bus service within the city and permitted to charge a rate that is prohibitive to people of modest means, thereby compelling them to ride in the street cars. We are in sore need of a competitive service that will bring the fare down to a reasonable level.

The death of Dr. Thomas E. Finegan, who passed away yesterday at Rochester, N. Y., brings to mind the great strides that public education made in Pennsylvania during the period in which he served as State Superintendent. Care must be taken by the Legislature, in considering the school bills to be introduced at the approaching session, not to sacrifice the gains made under Dr. Finegan's leadership.

While suspending judgment on the question if he is guilty, the people of Pittsburgh undoubtedly are gratified that Giuseppe Spinelli, accused of the murder of the Volpe brothers, has been arrested. It shows a zeal on the part of the police department that will be appreciated. The fact that the man was caught after he had left the country and gone to an obscure village in Italy is especially impressive.

To bring Spinelli back to Pittsburgh will be ex- pensive, as it is proposed to send two police officers, and possibly an assistant district attorney as well, to Italy to get the man and prosecute extradition proceedings. But public opinion will approve of "going the limit" in a case like this, where the defendant is accused of one of the most shocking crimes ever committed here.

Two appealing landscapes, both suitable for framing, compose the frontispiece of the Gravure Section in tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. One is a farming scene, the other an unusual river view. In the "Remember?" department there is a picture of Fifth avenue, looking from Wood street towards Market street, made in 1898.

"Women of Earlier Centuries" form the theme of gorgeous pictures in full color in tomorrow's edition of the American Weekly, issued as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Among the many interesting articles is one with a remarkable illustration describing a battle between a garter snake and a French snail at Harrisburg, Pa.—a battle which was won by the snail.

The Short End of the Rainbow

By Nelson Harding

How bright that bow of promise looked
When arched across the sea,
It seemed as fair and promising
As any bow could be.

But now we see the brilliant bow
Fades out upon this side,
While that expected pot of gold
Is far across the tide.

Adjourn Politics; Tax Beer; Cut Costs

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

There are so many things that may be done for the restoration of normal conditions in America aside from the plan of some to transfer the debts of 14 nations to the American taxpayers. One is to modify the Volstead act as soon as possible for the sake of revenue for a Treasury that has a deficit, and for the sake of a few hundred thousand jobless men who thereby may be put to work.

Whether this consummation, devoutly to be wished, can be brought about by the present Congress which has been predominantly dry in the past, is problematical, though probable. The roaring voice of the electorate this month has brought a great light to many members who have been in darkness. Some polls made would indicate the probability of success.

This, however, would not settle the matter, since the success of the effort would rest at length with President Hoover, who steadfastly has opposed any such interference with prohibition. When Representative Britten emerged from a conference with the President with the announcement that the latter would sign a beer bill, it seemed the fight was over. But the speedy denial from the White House that such a bill even was discussed with Mr. Britten leaves us still in doubt. The impropriety of Mr. Britten's statement without a definite understanding with the President that it should be made, is manifest. Thus there still is hope that something may be done during the short session.

* * *

The Tax On Beer

From the purely party point of view it would be more advantageous to the Democrats were nothing done until they assume absolute control of the government. From Mr. Hoover's viewpoint, it would be advantageous to him for such a bill to pass with his approval in the last days of his administration. The historian would conclude that the Democrats had fought the fight and won the victory in the campaign, but it would be possible for the politician to claim for the Hoover administration the credit for the bill.

But conditions cannot wait on politics.

The budget has not been balanced; the deficit still is piling up; business enterprise and individuals of small income are groaning even now under the burden of the extraordinary taxes levied in the last session; and there is something tragic in the prospect of adding more taxes on present sources.

One way out is the tax on beer, which will bring in hundreds of millions of dollars.

That tax will come when the Roosevelt administration comes in; but the new taxes to meet the deficit must be levied before it comes in; and, if levied now, the people will pay them for a year after the Roosevelt regime begins, even though the beer tax be added immediately after the 4th of March.

* * *

Reduce the Cost Of Government

There is another way to aid in the restoration of normal conditions—and that is to reduce the cost of government without delay—to cut down the amount of taxes that must be levied.

President Hoover, rather late, has discovered a way to reduce the cost of government as much as $700,000,000, according to the statement issued. This contemplates a reorganization of government and the elimination of numerous positions with a corresponding reduction in the personnel of government.

For years we have been transferring men from private enterprise to the payroll of the government until today it is estimated that every tenth man has a federal badge of some sort. If by reorganizations and reductions it is possible to save $700,000,000 a year to the taxpayers without destroying the efficiency of government the sooner it is done the better.

* * *

Nation's Vital Interest Is Involved

But again the political phase intrudes. The cynic instantly greeted the presidential plan submitted after the people had voted the administration and its party out of power with the comment that the purpose is to reduce as much as possible the patronage possibilities of the new regime. Otherwise, the cynic asks, why did the President wait for four years for the submission of the plan?

But again politics must step aside—for the nation's vital interest is involved.

And, happily, the Democratic leaders have the gumption to see the point and adopt it. Senator Harrison, soon to head the Finance Committee in the Senate, and the leaders in the House, have given their approval to the general plan for the saving of $700,000,000. Naturally they cannot discuss the plan until they know precisely what it provides; but as far as the loss of patronage is concerned they give consent to that.

And that is promising.

* * *

What of the Human Phase?

So much for the financial phase. What of the human phase?

Just now another effort is being made to raise funds by private subscription to feed the jobless and prevent the starvation of women and children. It will be more difficult now than it was a year ago. The reason is apparent. It is not because the public has grown callous to human misery.

Taxes have been increased enormously, and all who gave last year, even though their income be as great this year, are reduced in their capacity to give to the extent of the increase in their taxes. The average man finds it a greater drain this year to repeat on his contribution of last year.

Last year, municipalities appropriated many millions for relief. In many instances these municipalities are embarrassed by the loss in revenue and the increasing difficulty of getting loans from banks. Mayor McKee, of New York, says the municipality he represents must continue, as before, furnishing money for relief, and yet we are informed that there is some question whether the city will be able to meet its pay roll in December. The banks imply that they will make no loan.

Where is the money to come from?

This is the serious side of the relief problem for this winter. Only a very small per cent of the money used before to prevent starvation has come from private contributions. Most of it has come from public treasuries—and these are empty, or are emptying rapidly.

With individuals, in most cases, unable to give as much as before because of dwindling incomes and increasing taxes, and with public treasuries drained, where is the money coming from this winter?

* * *

The 'Share-the-Job' Movement

The plan of "Share-the-Job" is being pushed now; which means that the man with a job, whose wage has been reduced more than once, shall divide the job and the diminished income with some jobless man. Owen D. Young has just sought to meet the charge that this is a plan to shift the burden of caring for the jobless from government and philanthropy to the working classes. He does not meet it with a denial. He does meet it with the claim that employers' funds, the funds of private charity and the public treasuries have "reached the full limit of their capacity to respond."

But—without attacking the Share-the-Job movement—the worker who once made $40 a week and has been reduced to $25—has he the capacity to respond? No more than the others. But there is no way to force the individual to give more, and the worker can be forced. That is an ugly statement, but a true one.

More and more we are convinced that there was stupid shortsightedness in the failure to float a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan urged by Mr. Hearst two years ago, before unemployment got beyond bounds.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Sweet and Lowdown

Once a girl has had a weak moment for a man, nothing on earth that she can say or do will ever convince him that the vertigo has passed and she has got her strength back again.

* * *

There are two ways in which a woman can usually keep a man in the straight and narrow path. One is by making herself more alluring than his vices; the other is by spending his money so fast that he has neither the time nor the price left to indulge in his vices.

There ought to be some way, declares Reno-Ruth, to vaccinate a married man against the office siren; or else the latter should be made to wear a bell around her neck.

* * *

You realize how much the world has changed when you reflect that there is a whole generation of young men to whom a kiss without lip-rouge would be a brand new sensation.

* * *

Probably more marital love has been killed by a man's secret passion for onions, or roquefort cheese, than by all the rest of the seven deadly sins put together.

* * *

One reason why Samson finally let Delilah cut off his hair was probably because every girl he met was trying to run her fingers through it—and there's no feminine habit that really irritates a man more than that.

* * *

Make your engagement short and snappy. Many a girl has spent years waiting for a man to "get his start," only to find that when he finally got it, it started him in another woman's direction.

* * *

The more a man gets of anything in this world, the more he wants—unless it happens to be advice, spinach or the same girl's kisses.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Of all the boop-a-doops around New York my vote goes to that silly known as Cleopatra's Needle near the museum in Central Park. It just squats around in an iron nest as though waiting to be hatched or something. It will topple over some day, too, you just see.

If it does I know who I hope is hits. Cleopatra's Needle is really an Egyptian obelisk. The word obelisk always sounds to me like a hen laying an egg. Obelisk—and there's your egg! No one ever looks at it, although I've often wanted to sneak up to it, shirtless, and scratch my back.

It was erected in Cairo 3432 years ago. The frogs of the Plagues used to hop around on its plinth. Imagine anything so wishy-washy as to let a frog hop around on its plinth. Cairo got tired of it, they palmed it off as something swell on Alexandria at the time Cleopatra was peggy-joycing.

Two thousand years pass. Desert sandstorms obliterate most of the inscriptions so there isn't much left to read. O, yes, they continue to call it a Needle, yet the old crazy hasn't even an eye. Don't look now, but it strikes me the obelisk is beginning to lean!

Some Halloween with a good strong rope—but I speak out of turn. Poets write about "the pale shaft in the shifting light." Zebra knuckles to them and a sprig of rhubarb for dear old Aunt Ida! Don't take my word, go up and look at it some moonlight night.

If you like it, it is yours. Nobody will stop you. It's stately all right but so are those ladies they save to sit next to me at dinners. You know the sort. Her sister was so sweet to the hostess when she attended the Indianapolis auto races.

* * *

Don't get the idea I'm out to run down obelisks. They mean nothing to me. I go for days without giving one a thought. Indeed I spent a winter in Florida and not an obelisk crossed my mind. I realize an obelisk has its place but I was out late and can't think where. Yes I can, too, but never mind. Imagine being more than 3,000 years old and never doing anything but shooting up to scale the sky. What does sky scaling get you? Law me and O, poo!

* * *

A geologist I just phoned tells me the obelisk is a "granular, igneous gray rock consisting of feldspar and some silicates and little or no quartz." How's that for enthralling biography? Thrones rock, dynasties fall, a new race of men come into power, Rameses the Great—but why wade through all that? The really big event in the obelisk's career was when it was encased in a huge steel cylinder to be shipped away, and, in that dreaded Bay of Biscay, got beached. Since then it has been the dog—I won't name the gender—in the manger.

* * *

There's another Cleopatra's Needle along the tooting old Thames embankment. They seem to have just set out and run. It's getting blackier and smudgier all the time and beginning to crumble. So comic looking, indeed, it is the topic of no end of toodleoo, pip-pip and shove-off in the halls.

* * *

The best obelisk man in this country—musical play title suggestion: The Obelisk Man From Omsk—recently announced: "Weather will eventually disintegrate the Central Park shaft." It can't take it! If bad weather will end obelisks I'm willing to devote every other Tuesday forenoon wishing for rain.

* * *

I forgot to mention and it clears up everything. The obelisk was originated, planned and devised by a fellow named Phut Moses II. Imagine hiring a Phut to make anything but a motorboat. A fellow with a name like that is bound to be an up-to-no-gooder. All the time I'd be thinking "O Phut." All the time I would.

* * *

Something should be done to stop those pyramid pokers from digging up musty whatnots and gumming up our horizons. What are those fellows policing the desert from the top of camels doing? The next thing we know they'll be shipping us the Sphinx.

* * *

If we must have explorers let them follow Frank Bucks' formula and bring 'em back alive. Anyway, no more columns. We have too many as it is. For instance!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Always you are puzzling over yourself and your life. You are dissatisfied. There's a feeling of emptiness. Why are you so uncertain inside yourself? Why have you so little power over other people?

You can solve the riddle for yourself, partner, if you'll honestly answer one question:

HOW REAL ARE YOU?

HOW MUCH IS YOU; HOW MUCH IS MAKE-BELIEVE?

How much of the honest, original stuff is there in this Self which bears your name and meets the world? How much is synthetic or borrowed goods?

"But what difference does THAT make?" you cry in bewilderment.

It makes all the difference in the world. It makes the difference between success and failure outside you; between growth and stagnation inside you.

Only the REAL STUFF in your personality has authority. Only the thoughts which you think for yourself can give you any confidence in yourself. Only the deeds which you decide for yourself can give other people any confidence in you. The rest of your act may be charming and polite, but it will fool nobody, and it will give you no lasting peace or power.

So begin to take stock. How much REAL STUFF have you?

Your ideas, your opinions, your prejudices — did YOU create them? Are they the fruit of your own thought, your own struggles, your own experiments, your own rebellions, your own sacrifices and hardships?

Or have you inherited them as part of your family viewpoint?

Have you borrowed them because they seemed smart or pleasing?

Worse yet, do you trim your words and mold your actions to suit the pressure of the moment? Do you do the thing you really believe, or do you do the thing that seems expedient and profitable?

Do your expressions spring from courage, or from cowardice? Or are you just a copy-cat?

It's more comfortable to be a copy-cat. It's more safe to be a coward. And it's much less work to borrow than it is to build. So if you're just looking for comfort and safety and ease, go on copying, go on borrowing, go on hedging.

BUT IF YOU WANT REAL POWER AND REAL PEACE, BE YOURSELF!

Stop trying to copy "a line" or "put on an act." Yes, I know; you were told that such things would work, and you've spent most of your life trying to make them work. But you were told wrong. They won't work.

IF YOU WANT TO GET SOMETHING OUT OF LIFE, YOU MUST GIVE SOMETHING TO LIFE; SOMETHING THAT IS HONESTLY, BRAVELY YOUR OWN.

"But what have I to give?" you say, in discouragement. "I'm not very bright. I never think of anything new. I'm just a plain person."

That's all you need to be!

One ounce of honest plainness carries more punch and power than a ton of tricky make-believe.

The simplest worker, who honestly thinks for himself and acts for himself, gets more out of life and gives more to it than the noisiest blow-hard who is only a sounding board for other men's ideas. Even his mistakes are more honorable, and give him more lasting satisfaction, than the other man's successes.

IF YOU WANT TO LIVE—IF YOU WANT TO GET ALL THE TREASURE OUT OF LIFE—BE REAL!
